13,000 Win Applause in Capital Area OCD Parade

150,000 Line Avenue as Units Pass in Review; Landis Tells Aim

An estimated 150,000 spectators joined with approximately 13,000 marchers in the Civilian Defense parade last night, in the opening of a drive for 22,000 civilian defense volunteers, gave Washington its largest demonstration of unity during the war, and by so doing served notice on the Axis that America's home front is well guarded.

And for the first time since their organization, the ladies of the service proudly marched by, their leaders in high-pitched soprano ordering "eyes right," to the amazement of at least one hard-boiled old-time Army sergeant who said he expected to weep in his milk.

Nearly Three Hours

Pennsylvania Avenue, from Fourth to Fifteenth Streets was jammed with spectators for more than an hour before the parade began at 6:15 p. m. and until shortly after 9 o'clock, when the last marcher passed before the reviewing stand in Post Square before the District Building.

Following the parade, ceremonies were held in front of the District Building. James M. Landis, national Civilian Defense chief, was principal speaker. Some 30 volunteer workers were awarded defense ribbons in recognition of their having given more than 3000 hours time to the various home defense services.

Only Washingtonians, with an intimate knowledge of its history, realized the parade covered historic and hallowed ground. It was on "the Avenue" that Union veterans of the War Between the States marched in review after Appomattox. And 53 years later Gen. John J. Pershing, leader of the first American Expeditionary Force to Europe, returned the salute of the First Division on its return from the battle-scarred continent of 1914-18.

"Attack Is Possible"

Yesterday's parade and enthusiasm was one and the same with those of the past.

Landis, in his speech, warned that "the enemy, both Germany and Japan, can attack us here." He said it is "beyond the peradventure of doubt."

"We must start any thinking about, or any building of our system of defense at home now more than ever. The spectacle of America at war is breathtaking in its sweep and in its power," he said.

"Americans are proving that the great heritage of courage is theirs. The light of victory is in their eyes, the will to gain it fills their souls.

"At home the promise that we would be the arsenal of democracy has been fulfilled. We stand almost at a new threshold in our activity. Winning this war is not merely a matter of time. We dare not relax our waging of this war at home."

Landis cited the unprepared Hongkong, Singapore; Guam and said "Washington is always a choice target. Rome, Warsaw and Lon-

Shooting Down of Patrol Blimp Indicates New U-Boat Tactics

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Writer

An enemy submarine employing the latest Nazi defense tactics against America's aerial U-boat hunters recently counterattacked and shot down Patrol Blimp K-74 somewhere in the Atlantic, it was disclosed yesterday.

The battle was the first ever reported between a gas bag and a diving boat in which the aerial craft came off second best. There have been several unofficial reports of effective assaults on submarines by blimps, which are armed with machine-guns and depth charges.

A terse Navy communique said, "the K-74 was fired upon while attacking the submarine, and as the result of a hit, was forced to make a landing on the sea."

The air ship, the War Bulletin said, was lost. But all of its crew members were rescued except an aviation machinist's mate, Isadore Stessel of Brooklyn, N. Y. Normally there are 11 aboard.

This action was the first officially reported in which the new German sub defense was so clearly illustrated. Authorities have been aware for some time the Germans were trying out the only alternative they had to the unsuccessful crash-diving methods until recently. Employed in combatting antisubmarine defenses, the new method is simply to stay on the surface and fight it out with an attacking aircraft.

This apparently has been forced on the German under-sea raiders by the increasing success of American planes and blimps in destroying them or doing serious damage.

There have been many stories of the effectiveness of airplanes against submarines. Only about two weeks ago the Navy related the exploits of planes from a small aircraft carrier which sank two submarines and probably sank eight

Postwar

Maintenance of our national economy at 100-billion-dollar to 125-billion-dollar annual levels by private enterprise with Government assistance was presented as the key to "orderly" demobilization of our troops and industrials war-workers yesterday in a report by a 12-man presidential committee.

President Roosevelt told reporters that he was transmitting the 106-page document outlining a program for "full employment" after the war, to Congress with his general blessing, but with the understanding that Congress must work out the details.

Private Enterprise

The report called for immediate establishment of a "strong central directive agency . . . in the Federal Government" to plan for post-war readjustment of military and civilian personnel.

The report calls for dependence upon private enterprise "to the greatest possible extent," but assumes that the Government will foster "a dynamic expansionary economy in the readjustment period." A shelf of needed public works projects—not make-work plans—should be used as a second-line of defense against unemployment, the report said.

Cost to Be Heavy.

The committee warned that the cost of demobilization would be heavy and expressed the belief that a period as long as two years after the war might not provide sufficient time to complete the job without great unemployment. Shortly after the end of the war, unemployment may reach eight or nine millions, the committee stated, but predicted that unemployment could drop to three millions in two years if demobilization is planned properly.

The committee recommended a detailed six-point demobilization plan for veterans which followed

Auto Workers Ask Roosevelt For Rollbacks

Fishing Industry Far Behind Goal, Ickes Discloses

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

A vigorous policy on rollbacks in prices was urged on President Roosevelt yesterday by a delegation from the United Automobile Workers Union, who complained workers are being squeezed between "continually rising prices and practically frozen wages."

If prices are not rolled back, R. J. Thomas, president of the union, told the Chief Executive, the organization will have to ask for more pay for its members.

Walter P. Reuther, George F. Addes and Richard Leonard accompanied Thomas to the White House.

Fish Catch Short

Meantime, Coordinator of Fisheries Harold Ickes said the fishing industry was falling far behind its 1943 goal of production, OPA announced price increases in the 1943 packs of many canned fruits, berries and juices, and an announcement by the War Food Administration revealed purchases of corn under the WFA emergency program have amounted to only nine million bushels since July 1.

WFA officials said when the purchase plan was announced a supply of five million bushels weekly would be needed to keep in operation the industrial plants using corn to manufacture war materials such as glycerine. Because some of the plants had backlogs of raw materials, they are managing to keep going, it was declared.

U. S. to Buy More Corn

The Government will continue buying corn through August 10, it was announced, and farmers were again assured supplementary payments would be made to them if the corn price ceiling should be increased before October 31.

Secretary Ickes had previously announced a fishing production goal of six to seven billion pounds this year, but shortages of both men and boats have worked to keep overall figure down despite important increases in a few instances.

OPA had previously announced consumers would have to stand increased costs of raw materials and labor in the canning industry for foods other than those subsidized. The pricing formula reflecting

Flying Forts Batter Reich Plane Plant

Down 27 Nazi Craft; 2300 Tons of Bombs Hit Hamburg During Week's Seventh Raid

By the Associated Press

London, July 30.—Flying Fortresses in strong force battered a German plane factory at Kassel today while smaller American and Allied planes swept northern France and the Low Countries in force in an explosive epilogue to a 2300-ton bombing of burning Hamburg in its seventh attack in a week.

The Fortresses shot down 27 of the 52 or more German fighters destroyed in the daylight sweeps, among the heaviest of the Allied aerial offensive. Eleven Fortresses, one medium bomber, three light bombers and seven fighters were lost in a 61-22 victory score.

Fifty Tons a Minute

Massive formations of Allied bombers headed for the Continent again late tonight, after the day-raiding Americans returned, in this unprecedented hammering of Germany.

The Hamburg raid was "in very great strength" and was part of a sustained Allied effort to blot Germany's second city off the map with its great submarine works and other war plants. It was the third raid in the series of seven in which 2300 long tons (2600 U. S. tons) of explosives had plummeted on the city of 1,600,000 and the blockbusters were showering down at the rate of 50 tons a minute for three quarters of an hour.

"Never before in the history of warfare has an attack of such weight and persistence been made against a single industrial target," the Air Ministry news service said. "No other target in Germany has had more than a 2000-ton attack."

Fires have been licking at Hamburg's widening wounds without halt for six days and nights.

The Americans attacked Kassel in clear weather and "crews reported good bombing results," the communique said. Strong fighter opposition was encountered.

U. S. Airmen Rescued

U. S. medium bombers raided enemy airfields at Woendsdrecht in Holland, destroying six enemy planes. They were covered by British and Dominion Spitfires. R. A. F. bombers, escorted by Spitfires and Typhoons, attacked the Schipol airfield at Amsterdam, destroying three Nazi craft, the British also pounded the Courtrai and Coxyde fields in Belgium, also Poix and Yainville.

An idea of the scale of the daylight raids was suggested in an Air Ministry statement that 500 British fighters alone participated.

Yanks Knife Deeper Into Mt. Etna Line

Canadians Smash Ahead in Center; Allies May Swing Behind Catania

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 30.—A mighty American offensive against weakening northern sections of the German front slammed forward today over the rugged highlands of Sicily toward the Messina Strait.

Spurred by "keep striking" orders of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., the doughboys knifed into Axis positions and threatened to beat in the doors of Axis defenses hinged on San Stefano on the north coast and Catania on the east.

The Americans advanced in "several places" yesterday, a terse communique declared, while Canadians in the center drove ahead against powerful opposition and British troops fought successful small engagements below Catania.

Aloft, Allied air power struck against ports and roads in Sicily, shipping in the Tyrrhenian Sea, and at airdromes in Italy near Naples and Rome.

Warships Shell Mainland

(British cruisers and destroyers shelled the Italian mainland Thursday without opposition, hitting at railway lines and bridges on the shore south of Crotone, said a B. B. C. broadcast recorded by U. S. Government monitors.)

San Stefano, already strategically outflanked by American capture of Nicosia, 19 miles inland, still was officially in Nazi hands, but U. S. troops were near its gates.

If the Germans can hold San Stefano temporarily, their hastily revamped Mount Etna line is expected to run from there to Troina, 11 miles east of Nicosia, then south to Regalbuto, menaced by the Canadians, and thence eastward along the north bank of the Dittaino River to the Catania plain.

With the British hotly engaging the largest portion of the German army on Catania plain and the Canadians crashing through a series of tough rearguard actions by the Fifteenth German Armored Division, the Americans are in position to swing back of the enemy around the north side of Mount Etna's 2-mile high crater.

Pincers Operation

The Canadians were pounding on past Agira, central town of the Mount Etna line captured Wednesday, and Canadian Press Correspondent Ross Munro reported that the crack German troops were retreating in confusion.

The Canadians operated with the Americans as a pincers pressing upon vulnerable points in the center of the dwindling bridgehead.

Nazis Fly Men To Orel as Reds Close In

Onrushing Soviets Slay at Least 4000 German Troops

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), July 31.—The Red army, plunging through muddy fields and forests, gained 6 miles yesterday and captured 20 villages rimming the Orel death trap where savagely resisting German forces have been bolstered by fresh troops just ferried in by air transport from Germany, it was announced early today by Moscow.

Captured German prisoners said they had flown from Stettin, Germany, only 24 hours before they were engulfed by the onrushing Soviet armies which killed at least 4000 Axis troops near the key German base yesterday, said a midnight Moscow bulletin recorded here by the Soviet monitor.

In violent battles punctuated by attacks and counterattacks by both sides, the Germans were reported fighting on urgent orders "to prevent the complete defeat of the German army."

Heavy Toll at Orel

The communique issued last night said the Germans had lost 21 tanks and 36 planes Thursday on all fronts.

Most of the toll was taken around Orel where Soviet troops are within 8 miles of the city on one side.

But around Belgorod, the Nazis launched an attack in one sector with great forces of infantry and tanks, but were repulsed the communique said.

In the Donets Basin, southwest of Voroshilovgrad, large forces of attacking Germans also were declared repulsed.

The communique added: "The Germans are suffering particularly serious losses from Soviet artillery" in this sector.

On the Leningrad front Russian artillery and mortars wiped out 52

Roosevelt Tells What Italians Must Assure

Says Allies Will Deal With Any But Fascista Members

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday that the Allies would deal with King Vittorio Emanuele, Marshal Badoglio or even the mayor of a town, provided that they can insure two things in Italy:

1. That the Italians lay down their arms.

2. That there be no anarchy.

The President said we didn't care whom we dealt with so long as they weren't members of the Fascist Party.

The question came up at Mr. Roosevelt's press conference. A reporter said there had been some discussion as to whether we ought to deal with the King or Marshal Badoglio. Would the President clarify that point?

Conquerors' Task

The Chief Executive said the question reminded him of the age-old argument of which came first, the chicken or the egg. When a victorious army goes into a country, he said, there are two important considerations: Getting the soldiers of that country to lay down their arms, and preventing anarchy. He said it takes an awful lot of troops to put down anarchy.

Mr. Roosevelt then went on to say that, barring outright members of the Fascist Party, we would deal with anybody—the King, the Prime Minister or the mayor of a town—so long as they could stop the fighting and maintain order.

Of course, the President said, these were only the first steps. The Atlantic Charter provides that a people be allowed to choose their own form of government. But that, he said, was a long-range consideration.

He didn't think any controversy was called for at this time, and he

Hitler Looks Southward With Interest, Berlin Says

Churchill Summons War Cabinet to Midnight Parley; No Peace Move Yet

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), July 31.—British Cabinet members and heads of the fighting services have been ordered to stand by over the weekend for war developments apparently in connection with riot-torn Italy, it was learned early today.

Indicating that the Italian effort to make war was deteriorating rapidly, the Berlin radio issued an ominous statement that Germany was "looking with particular interest toward northern Italy."

The broadcast said that in northern Italy "according to neutral reports, the situation is so far not clarified, as communist elements are calling forth ever fresh unrest there."

This propaganda line may precede a full-scale German occupation of northern Italy, where German troops are moving in, according to Swiss and Madrid reports.

One London newspaper, the Daily Mirror, carried a banner headline saying, "Italy May Be Out of the War Tomorrow."

Nothing Definite Yet

Prime Minister Churchill's official family was called into a hurried consultation just after midnight today, generating conjecture that Italy had approached the Allies with a white flag.

However it was understood late last night that nothing was known in the capital of any Italian approach for an armistice.

(Marshal Badoglio, urging the peace-hungry Italian people to be patient, said tonight:

"Italy can not now get out of the war honestly and safely without the exercise of great wisdom and cunning. This requires time."

(The Marshal's broadcast to the Italian people was quoted by B. B. C., whose broadcast was recorded by N. B. C.)

The Algiers radio, recorded by the Daily Mail, bluntly told Italians: "The sands are fast running out. Marshal Badoglio cannot think he can temporize by delicately balancing between the Allied and the Nazi war machines. If he forgets his duty it will be up to the Italian people to see that those things are done which their honor and their right to live demand."

10 Downing Silent

No. 10 Downing Street kept silent, as is usual when big things are in the wind, except for the bare disclosure that Churchill summoned the war cabinet members from sleep in the middle of last night for one meeting and then conducted a second session by daylight.

But from neutral listening posts and Axis radios streamed news and propaganda of grave developments

Flame-Throwers Help U. S. Forces Advance on Munda

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Saturday), July 31 (AP).—Aided by tanks and flame-throwers, American troops yesterday pressed closer to the vital Japanese airdrome at Munda, New Georgia, after hurling back a counterattack.

It was the first time the use of flame-throwers in this area had been mentioned.

Dive-bombers, escorted by fighters, also assisted the advancing Americans, bombing enemy installations at Munda Point and bombing and strafing gun positions at the Munda supply base at Bairoko, 10 miles north. At least 11 barges were destroyed.

Four-engined bombers, with strong fighter escort, raided the Buin-Faisi area in the northern Solomons, whence aid to Munda might be sent.

The Pace Tells

Factory Raids Whittling Down Germany's Air Fighter Strength

The German fighter opposition to American-British aerial assaults upon the Continent is slackening because of the Flying Fortress raids upon plants producing that type of craft and because of the large number of German fighters knocked from the skies, dispatches from London said yesterday.

Fortress pilots told of the reduced opposition, The Associated Press reported, and the commanding officer at one American field in England said that between 50 and 75 per cent of the factories making the Reich's vaunted Focke-Wulf 190 have been knocked out in the current Fortress offensive alone.

Photograps from the American raid Thursday upon Warnemuende, near Rostock on the Baltic Coast, showed that bomb bursts "smothered" almost every unit of the Ernst Heinkel plane factory, which turns out these craft. This was the second American heavy bomber attack there in the last week.

Yesterday Fortresses hit the huge Fieseler aircraft plant at Kassel, for the second time this week, and pilots reported that bombs struck all over the center, which is reputed to have turned out 500 engines monthly for Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs.

On Wednesday, the heavy bombers attacked the Focke-Wulf plant at Ocherleben, 80 miles from Berlin, with their precision blows.

Thus in three days the three [illegible] important production and [illegible]bly centers for Focke-Wulfs [illegible]hit, and the Internat[illegible] Service quoted the [illegible]ander at one Army [illegible]ion as saying:

"There is no question of them resuming production. There is nothing left to work with. We have completed the groundwork for complete air superiority over Europe—and we are going to keep it."

Another high officer, according to the Associated Press, declared that because of this strategy "we can go anywhere we want to go in Europe."

Pilots recently have reported that they have encountered somewhere between 150 and 400 enemy fighters in their sweeps over the Continent, but the ineffectiveness of such defense was indicated by a British Air Ministry statement which said that yesterday there were 500 British fighters alone participating in offensive action and in protecting American heavy craft and both British and American medium and light bombers.

Another indication of waning German strength came from the British, who reported that the R. A. F. lost only 83 heavy bombers in the four large assaults of this week from a total force of probably 3000 planes. Total losses for July were 156, compared with 269 for June, during which month there were more raids because of better weather. The Americans have lost 86 heavy bombers, but have accounted for more than 250 Nazi fighters in a week. There was no indication of the size of the American attacking force.

None of the assaults take into account the devastating and continuing blows on German fighter fields where at least nine enemy planes were destroyed on the ground alone yesterday.

Neilson Takes Action

7 Forfeiting Food Handlers Ordered by Court to Face Trial

Declaring, "No food operator will be allowed to avoid trial by merely forfeiting $25 collateral," Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court yesterday ordered attachments issued to insure the court appearance of all restaurant operators charged with permitting insanitary conditions in their establishments.

Judge Neilson acted after he saw the majority of health law violators forfeited $25 collateral and thus avoided fines, the maximum being $300 for each offense.

As he issued his pronouncement that he will continue to issue attachments until such time as collaterals are raised to the point where defendants will voluntarily come to trial, he held seven warrants in his hand, and learned none of the defendants had come to court. All had forfeited their security. This has occurred in the majority of the 60 cases which have reached the court this month.

The warrants yesterday contained the following:

Lewis Goodman, operator of a restaurant at 935 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, charged with selling and keeping in his refrigerator 175 pounds of decomposed meat. He had posted $100 collateral, having been convicted two weeks ago on another health charge when he was fined $50.

Irving Pincus, 303 N Street Southwest, charged with having rotten celery, spoiled carrots and cabbage, dirty floors, shelves and counters, $25 collateral.

Roosevelt Warns All Neutrals Not to Harbor Axis Criminals

President Roosevelt yesterday asked the few neutral countries in the world not to give sanctuary to Mussolini, Hitler, Tojo and "other war criminals." To give asylum to these Axis leaders or their tools, he said, would be inconsistent with the principles for which the United Nations are fighting.

Mr. Roosevelt was prompted to issue his pointed statement by rumors that Mussolini and his henchmen may try to take refuge in neutral territory.

The British government, it was announced in London, associated itself fully with President Roosevelt's action. Russia followed up with specific winnings to both Switzerland and Turkey.

President Roosevelt gave out his statement at a press conference. It follows:

"On August 21, 1942, I issued a statement to the press in which after referring to the crimes against innocent people committed by the Axis powers I stated:

" 'The United Nations are going to win this war. When victory has been achieved, it is the purpose of the Government of the United States, as I know it is the purpose of each of the United Nations, to make appropriate use of the information and evidence in respect to the barbaric crimes of the invaders, in Europe and in Asia. It seems only fair that they should have this warning that the time will come when they shall have to stand in courts of law in the very countries which they are now op-

Cardinal's Opinion

Italy, Allies May Battle Common Foe

By Don Whitehead
Associated Press Staff Writer

Palermo, Sicily, July 26 (Delayed).—Luigi Cardinal Lavitrano told a high-ranking American Army officer today he believed the resignation of Mussolini would mean eventually the Italian army would fight beside the Allies to expel Germans from Italy.

News of Marshal Badoglio's assumption of power from Il Duce swept through Palermo and there was a wave of happiness.

High-ranking officers of the United States Seventh Army are inclined to be more conservative. From a military point of view they have taken a dark outlook and assume the Italian army will follow Badoglio's orders for firm resistance.

"The army didn't want to fight for Mussolini," one officer said. "But they may fight for Badoglio because he's an old army man and one whom they respect. They will not be fighting for fascism now but for Italy."

Pier Luigi, editor of Giornale Di Sicilia, said he believed for a time there would be stiffened resistance from the Italians but that with Mussolini ousted from power, the chances for peace were greater.

Says Leave-Something Strategy Is Really Destructive to Axis

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 30.—Max Karant, aviation editor who recently surveyed England's air force and aircraft industry, said today Allied bombers have a definite strategy of just damaging targets, as well as destroying them completely.

"They figure sometimes they can do more damage to the German war effort by leaving a little—and then damaging it again—than to obliterate it," he said.

Karant, managing editor of Flying Magazine, described the leave-something bombing technique at a press conference at which he reported on his survey, made at the invitation of the British Air Ministry.

"They don't pull any punches," he emphasized. "They try to do as much damage as possible on a raid, but they seldom if ever wipe out all their target the first time.

"If they do smash it, well and good. If they find it is not destroyed, but is damaged enough to be knocked out temporarily, they frequently let it alone. Then after the enemy, using precious materials, transportation, and manhours, has almost restored a plant or area, Allied planes smash it again, thus making a complete waste of all the Germans' time and material. The Allies are pleased with the result of this technique.

"They want to tie up as much German industry and transportation as possible."

Karant said England was "the biggest aircraft carrier I've ever seen."

"To give an idea of the extent the isles are covered with landing fields, I flew from Scotland to London and was never out of sight of at least two large airdromes," he added.

"In any ordinary flight planes are constantly crossing above and below you and whole formations pass right in front of you at your altitude."

Chaos Grows At Hamburg, Witnesses Say

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, July 30.—The relentless Allied aerial pounding of Hamburg has left Germany's greatest seaport in a chaotic condition, with its communications virtually paralyzed, eye-witness reports said tonight.

The main railway station is gutted and the telephone exchange building has been hit so hard the city's phone system has been crippled.

Other damage reported by these eye-witnesses:

Three submarines in process of completion on the Blohm and Voss wharf were blown to pieces.

Elbe Tunnel Flooded

A direct hit flooded the Elbe Canal tunnel carrying motor traffic and supplies between the Blohm and Voss yards, the Deutsche Verft plant, and the city proper.

Traffic over the Lomboards Railway bridge across the Alster has been halted by a bomb hit.

The meteorological headquarters in the St. Paul's district of Hamburg and the administration building of the Hapag Shipping Co. have been wrecked by explosives and fire.

A stick of bombs fell across the Steinhoft quay, wrecking it and putting all installations out of commission.

Swedish Ship Sunk

That Hamburg harbor received a thorough blasting also is indicated by a Swedish announcement that one Swedish merchantman was destroyed and another badly damaged in the port.

The Swedish-Norwegian Press Bureau, reporting on the July 24 Flying Fortress raid on Heroya, Norway, said the Eidanger saltpeter factories and Porsgrunn electrometallurgical factory were damaged to such an extent as to halt production, in addition to the ruining of the gigantic aluminum plant at Heroya.

District Court Stays WPB Ban On Tool Sales

The War Production Board was put under a temporary restraining order yesterday by Justice David Pine of District Court, which order will prevent the WPB from enforcing, until at least August 5, a "suspension order" limiting the sale of tools by a California hardware company.

B. Simon Hardware Co., Inc. of Oakland, Calif., charged that WPB was usurping the powers of the courts by imposing penalties after holding administrative hearings. The complaint avers that WPB has no power to enforce penalties, and is violating the Constitution.

Justice Pine set August 5 for a hearing of the complaint on its merits, when he will decide whether to put the WPB under an injunction or to permit it to carry out its suspension order which will then go into effect for six months. The suspension order was for an alleged violation of allotments of tools for sale.

FIGHTING REPORTED—Madrid reported yesterday new outbreaks of fighting between German and Italian soldiers in north Italy. in Italy as Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio struggled to maintain cohesion of his people and his army.

Badoglio's troops were again reported in a dispatch from Madrid to have clashed in northern Italy with reinforced German divisions —which Axis broadcasts said were maneuvering simply as allies of the Italians.

Madrid advices said the Germans had established a guard over five Italian submarines which they found berthed at Fiume yesterday and were assigning Nazi crews to man them for use in the Adriatic against any Allied attempt to flank the Balkans through Dalmatia.

Axis reports said the Germans expected no trouble from the 14 Italian divisions now occupying southern Croatia and the Dalmatian coast.

It is believed that the most the Italians might do is to cede their arms and stores to guerillas, perhaps to Gen. Draja Mihailovich as well as to other groups, and then head for home in the event of peace negotiations, these advices said.

To keep Italian arms from these groups, however, the Germans are reported working close to the Croat Ustachi. Dr. Ante Pavelic's forces at Zagreb were reported to have promised the Croats that they may incorporate the Dalmatian area south of Fiume into a new Croat state if they help the Germans occupy Dalmatia in the event Italy surrenders to the Allies.

Italian troops at Milan were declared in a dispatch from the Swiss frontier town of Chiasso to be in virtual mutiny and to have been placed under a new commander, Gen. Vittorio Ruggero, after refusing to fire upon citizens who crowded the streets by the thousands shouting for peace. DNB had told earlier of an "extremely difficult" situation at Milan, saying rioters shot at everything in uniform, German or Italian.

The majority of the Italian people "ardently desire rebirth of the country on a democratic basis," the Swiss telegraphic agency said. The controlled Italian press termed demonstrators "Extremists and Communists."

(The Rome radio, in a French-language broadcast beamed to France, said that "the Italian people is considering with great understanding those conditions which the enemy proposes and is aware of the seriousness of the dilemma."

(The broadcast was reported by the U. S. Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service which said its monitors had not heard any Italian broadcast to Italy along that line.)

The German Transocean News Agency said all members of the outlawed Italian Fascist Grand Council except one, "particularly radical," had been arrested. The German propaganda agency did not identify the man still free, nor did it say why he escaped arrest, but Mussolini was one of the life members of the council.

The Budapest radio, however, said that Count Dino Grandi, a member of the council and former Italian ambassador to London, was received in private audience by Pope Pius XII today and that Luigi Federzoni, also a member and president of the Italian Academy of Sciences, had conferred yesterday with the Pope. This report was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Staffs of Italian railways, mail, telegraph and radio services were militarized by decree.

Twenty prefects and several party secretaries whose dismissal was announced yesterday were called up for service in Italy's armed forces, the Rome radio announced.

The Rome station insisted that the unconditional surrender "conditions propounded by the enemy exclude any possibility of real peace."

Nazis Fly Fresh Troops to Orel

Nazi blockhouses and dugouts, blew up an ammunition dump and killed about a battalion of Germans.

On the Kalinin front a Red reconnaissance group in a surprise blow forced the Nazis out of one populated place and took prisoners.

The communique said Russian planes sank one transport and badly damaged another in the Gulf of Finland, while Soviet ships in the Barents Sea sank two Nazi patrol vessels.

Although high points of the Soviet advance on the semicircular front around Orel have reached villages within eight miles of city, the front was irregular. Daily announcements of gains of from two to 10 miles were presumably part of the operations to straighten the lines and squeeze tighter the clamp around the prize Axis base.

pressing and answer for their acts.'

"On October 7, 1942, I stated that it was 'the intention of this Government that the successful close of the war shall include provisions for the surrender to the United Nations of war criminals.'

"The wheels of justice have turned constantly since those statements were issued and are still turning. There are now rumors that Mussolini and members of his Fascist gang may attempt to take refuge in neutral territory. One day Hitler and his gang and Tojo and his gang will be trying to escape from their countries. I find it difficult to believe that any neutral country would give asylum to or extend protection to any of them. I can only say that the Government of the United States would regard the action by a neutral government in affording asylum to Axis leaders or their tools as inconsistent with the principles for which the United Nations are fighting and that the United States Government hopes that no neutral government will permit its territory to be used as a place of refuge or otherwise assist such persons in any effort to escape their just deserts."

Fatality Toll Mounts To 20 in Texas Storm

Houston, Tex., July 30 (AP).—The hurricane-scarred Texas Gulf Coast's death toll reached 20 today as four men were reported lost from the tugboat, Titian, which foundering in storm-swept seas.

Approximately 25,000 families were directly affected by the storm Tuesday and about 20,000 homes were destroyed or damaged, Robert C. Edson, director of disaster relief for the Red Cross, said. Scores of persons were injured.

Yanks Cut Deeper Into Etna Line

At Agira, the Canadians are only 10 miles south of the highway town of Troina. They could execute a cross-country flanking movement against Troina if the U. S. forces were held up.

Munro said heavy artillery barrages and tank and infantry thrusts smashed the German Twenty-ninth motorized troops at Agira, and that prisoners taken included Germans who arrived in Sicily eight days ago, and veterans of Stalingrad. The Canadians also took Nissoria, between Leonforte and Agira.

The Americans' great wheeling movement employed modernized Indian scoutcraft for infiltration in the green northern hills, and the United States troops in their sweat and dust-stained woolens wrenched vital hill after hill from the German grasp.

They brought their motorized artillery up the rough, roadless canyons and smashed each pocket of resistance with mathematical precision.

Poor communications from the American sector to the outside prevented much of this story from being reported quickly, but indications were that Patton's continuing assault was becoming an epic of American military history.

May Make Last Stand

Somewhere between Troina and the Messina Strait there was a possibility the Germans might make a last ditch stand in formidable mountain positions to compare with their immovable opposition to the Eighth Army on the east coast. But as yet the Americans have shown a capacity to overrun so-called impregnable natural fortresses in Sicily.

American and R. A. F. light bombers and fighter-bombers turned to the assistance of ground troops with blazing attacks on the few remaining harbors and roads remaining in Axis hands on the island. Thirty to 40 Axis trucks were destroyed.

Torpedo carrying Beaufighters attacked a small convoy 20 miles from Cape Palinuro in the Tyrrhenian Sea, leaving a merchant ship sinking and setting fire to a destroyer and a motor torpedo boat.

Ranging 50 miles northeast of Rome, unchallenged Flying Fortresses blasted the airdrome of Viterbo, setting fires and causing explosions.

U. S. Marauders escorted by Lightnings bombed Aquino airdrome near Naples, laying one bomb among eight parked planes. R. A. F Wellingtons rained block-busters upon Capodichino airdrome outside Naples and upon Monte Corvino Ravella airfield 30 miles southeast of Naples.

Four Allied planes were missing from all operations. One enemy fighter was reported destroyed.

Mayor's Wife Launches U.S.S. Charlottesville

Superior, Wis., July 30 (AP).—As the band played "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," Mrs. J. Emmett Gleason, wife of the Charlottesville, Va., Mayor, launched the frigate Charlottesville at Walter Butler Shipyards this afternoon. She made a perfect hit with a bottle of champagne as the trim fighting ship slid sidewise down the ways.

rescue missions, picking up six American airmen from the sea.

The United States raid on Kassel was the sixth American assault on Germany in seven days and brought to 10 the total made by United States big bombers this month.

United States Thunderbolts which met the Fortresses near the German border to escort them home destroyed 25 German fighters.

Most Bombed City

The British raid on Hamburg raised to 6900 tons the total dropped on Europe's biggest port since Saturday. The R. A. F., in the whole week, had dropped 8900 tons on German targets, including Essen, which until last night had been the world's most bomb-tortured city.

Hamburg still was blazing from previous raids, and smoke curling five miles above the city beckoned British and Canadian fliers. The R. A. F. lost 28 bombers, but the great black-winged armada destroyed at least six Nazi night fighters.

"Hamburg seemed absolutely burned out," Pilot Officer Gordon Barnholden of the Canadian Air Force commented. He described a "gigantic" explosion near the North River docks which "shot flames that spread like mushrooms 4000 feet into the sky."

Hamburg is the place where the first disaffection in German armed forces began in 1918. The Moscow radio said that the German secret police chief, Heinrich Himmler, had arrived in the city because of recent peace manifestations prompted by previous raids.

War's End Demanded

"The demonstrations (in Hamburg) demanded an immediate end of the war and called for an active struggle against Hitler," the unconfirmed Moscow broadcast said, quoting a Stockholm dispatch. "Authorities were at a loss and didn't know how to deal with the situation. In fact, many have fled the city."

The German communique called the raid "another heavy terror attack, causing further devastations. The population suffered heavy casualties." The Germans said Helgoland also was bombed and that 54 attacking planes were downed.

The British Air Ministry said German ground defenses had been increased and that numerous night fighters were encountered, but that these "did not succeed in interfering with the delivery of a highly concentrated attack in clear weather." The Germans particularly increased the use of searchlights, using a new technique of moving the lights slowly across the sky.

Marked for Swift Doom

It was Hamburg's 105th attack. Since Saturday night, British bombers have raided the port five times and U. S. Flying Fortresses have hit twice in daylight. The last raid capped the greatest week of aerial warfare ever mounted by any air force. The raids have ranged from Warnemuende on the German Baltic coast to the French Bay of Biscay, with record bomb loads aimed principally at German war plants. Scores of German airfields, aircraft and U-boat factories have been bombed.

Hamburg seemed marked for swift doom.

The four-month battle of the Ruhr convinced Allied bomber chiefs that it was possible to knock out great industrial areas, so all power has been turned on the German city, second in size and importance only to Berlin itself.

Blitz on England Topped

Close to 800 planes made the raid last night.

The 9900 tons of bombs the RAF has cast on Germany this week are more than 1300 tons more than the Luftwaffe dropped on Britain during the 90-day blitz three years ago.

During all July the R. A. F. alone has dumped more than 12,000 tons of bombs on German installations.

Added to the British total must be the undisclosed weight loosed by the USAAF. The Americans started a week of attack last Saturday raiding the Norwegian submarine base of Trondheim and the aluminum works at Heroya near Oslo. Since then heavy American bombers have hit twice at Kiel, Hamburg, Warnemuende and Kassel and once at the German cities of Wustrow, Hanover, Wilhelmshaven, Wesermunde and Oschersleben and the Dutch town of Woendrecht.

Wins Third Star

Vandegrift Promoted in Marine Corps

GEN. VANDEGRIFT

Alexander A. Vandegrift, who commanded the Marines at Guadalcanal, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant general and appointed commanding officer of the First Marine Amphibious Corps, the Marine Corps announced today.

Vandegrift, who was a major general when the Marines landed in the Solomons in August of last year, is the second Marine ever to attain the grade of lieutenant general on the active list. The other is Lieut. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, now commandant of Marines.

Maj. Gen. William H. Rupertus, like Vandegrift a veteran of the Solomons campaign, succeeds Vandegrift as commanding officer of the First Marine Division. Rupertus, a resident of Washington, is now on duty with forces in the Pacific.

Vandegrift, 56 years old, is a resident of Charlottesville, Va. As commander of the Amphibious Corps, Vandegrift replaces Maj. Gen. Clayton B. Vogel, of Philadelphia, named commanding officer at Camp LeJeune, Marine base at New River, N. C.

Axis Abandons Heavy Guns in Sicily Retreat

By the Associated Press

With the United States Seventh Army in Sicily (Delayed), July 24.—Advancing swiftly on the coast road after the fall of Palermo, American troops forced the Axis to abandon great quantities of arms and equipment, including four six-inch guns mounted on railway carriages.

Lieut. Col. C. C. Cornish of Oklahoma City, found heavy artillery by accident as he drove along a cow-path in a jeep around a dynamited bridge near Termini.

Crossing the railway tracks, Cornish came on the guns, which the Italians had made no effort to damage in their hasty retreat toward Messina. The guns were in good condition and mounted on specially built railroad cars.

The guns had been fired, for there were empty shell cases about the cars. The electric control car was intact, as were the fire direction instruments. The Army may be able to use the guns if it wishes, for the Italians left plenty of ammunition behind.

In addition to the 6-inch guns, Cornish found two 90 mm., two 37 mm., six 20 mm. and six new Breda antiaircraft guns among the Italian guns.

In the great rooms of an old church and the gray-walled one-time castle at Cefalu the Army discovered huge stores of blankets, socks, handkerchiefs, Swedish made gasoline stoves, lanterns, sheets, silverware and hospital equipment.

Officers estimated there were at least 20,000 wool and cotton blankets, hundreds of dozens of handkerchiefs, hundreds of sheets and pillow cases. The stores, worth thousands of dollars, can be utilized by the Seventh Army immediately to save shipping space.

Detailed Plan For Release of Troops Given

in more detail, the plan outlined by the President in his Wednesday night fireside chat. To avoid creation of special interest pressures, comparable presumably to the drive for bonuses after the last war, the committee suggested that the Government make its policy clear as soon as possible.

3-Month Furlough

A three-months' furlough at regular base pay, not to exceed $100 a month plus family allowances, unemployment insurance for 26 weeks beyond that time for those registered with the United States Employment Service, readjustment counsel to find jobs, free tuition for those who want to resume their education, veterans' credit for time spent in service under the old-age and survivors' insurance scheme, and opportunities for agricultural jobs and land settlement for qualified servicemen, make up the six point program proposed for military demobilization.

In releasing workers from war jobs, war contracts should be terminated in a slow and orderly manner, the report said, with full consideration to be given to maintaining a modified war production for civilian consumption during the changeover period plus production of the minimum amount of war goods needed for security.

Order of Precedence

Such wartime controls as those over prices should be maintained until an adequate supply of consumer goods has been restored to the country's markets to prevent inflation, the report suggested.

The report recommended the following order of precedence in releasing men from service:

(1) Those married with dependents (2) those married without dependents (3) those unmarried with dependents (4) those unmarried without dependents.

Other factors to be taken into consideration, the report recommends, are length and nature of service, occupations which are needed to help reestablish peacetime production, incompleted training which the individual soldier desires to complete.

Those desiring to continue in military service should be permitted to do so, the report recommends.

2 Demobilization Fronts

The report visualizes two fronts of demobilization—the front where the men are released and the areas where efforts are being made to restore peacetime production.

Special demobilization centers, strategically located, and fully equipped, are needed to provide the servicemen with information and guidance when they are being released from active duty, the report said.

To assist on the second front, the report suggests a strengthening of certain Government agencies to funnel the men back to private life. Specifically, the report called for the strengthening of the United States Employment Service now in preparation for demobilization and nationalization of the State unemployment compensation systems to provide adequately for the expected unemployed.

Fear of Congress that continuation of the United States Employment Service in Federal hands would lead inevitably to the nationalization of the U. S. systems has deterred Congress from granting adequate funds to the already nationalized USES.

U. S. Merchant Ship Sunk by Enemy Sub

A small United States merchant vessel has been torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the Arabian Sea, and survivors have been landed at New York, the Navy reported yesterday.

Gens. Giraud And De Gaulle Feuding Again

By the Associated Press

Algiers, July 30.—The dispute between Gen. Charles de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud over the fusion of their armed forces was reported today to have broken out again and more violently than before.

A long session of the French National Committee of Liberation, which the generals head as cochairmen, was said to have been the sounding board.

A Frenchman familiar with the situation gave this account:

The basic agreement of De Gaulle and Giraud pivots around the question of creating a commissariat of defense in which a military chief will function.

Giraud opposed bringing this office into existence and he particularly objects to having De Gaulle occupy the post.

A majority of the committee members appear to be backing De Gaulle. They take the position that recent military and political developments, particularly the invasion of Sicily and the resignation of Mussolini, brought the invasion of France much closer and, therefore, they feel that the fusion issue should be resolved immediately.

The idea of De Gaulle's supporters is that it would be confusing if not dangerous to land two distinct French armies in France.

The committee already has agreed to have Giraud as commander in chief. No decision has been reached as to whether the commander in chief's powers would be subordinated to those of the proposed commissioner of defense.

Power Launch Dropped to Fliers Adrift in Sea

At a U. S. Bomber Station in England, July 30 (AP).—Crew members of the Flying Fortress "Happy Daze" which was shot down only 30 miles off the German coast after last Sunday's bombing of Kiel, told today of their rescue.

As the ship crashed into the sea and broke in half, one member of the crew was lost. The others suffered only scratches or bruises and were rescued about 48 hours later by the Allied air-base rescue service.

The wreckage sank in 15 seconds, giving the survivors just time to jump overboard and start swimming toward their rubber lifeboats.

About noon Monday an R. A. F. Lancaster bomber sighted the fliers and dropped dinghies. It then stayed around, warding off a Junkers 88 which was hovering in the distance. Soon another Lancaster and three Stirlings came out and stood guard until a Lockheed Hudson flew over and dropped a power launch by parachute. "It was a really a sight to see that boat come parachuting down," said Waist Gunner Sergt. Herbert H. Simes of Brooklyn, N. Y.

"They dropped it from about 500 feet and it settled right down beside us. It contained sleeping bags, food, water, gas and directions for running it."

The next morning fishing boats returning to port took the crew aboard.

Buying insurance of doubtful security in order to save premium cost is like an aviator buying a defective parachute because it's cheap. If he's going to need it at all, only the best is good enough. New Main Attacks In Pacific Hinted

War Sidelights

500 Rescued From Timor By Our Ships

Melbourne, Australia, July 30 (AP). Aneta, the Netherlands News Agency, today reported details of the hazardous rescue of more than 500 Portuguese priests, nuns, government officials and natives from Japanese-held Timor by Allied warships.

"The Japanese had strong forces on Timor at the time," Aneta related, "and the warships were in constant peril of air attack while making their way to the rendezvous where it was known the refugees were waiting."

Among the refugees were Msgr. Jaime Goulart, apostolic administrator; nine other priests and a number of nuns, government officials, including Attorney General Noronha.

"The refugees have been settled in a former military camp," Aneta said.

In London Vice Admiral C. E. L. Helfrich, commander of Netherlands forces in the Southwest Pacific, said that last September a Dutch destroyer had made three hazardous trips to Timor to rescue 952 persons.

Allied Transport Damaged

Lisbon, July 30 (AP).—A huge Allied transport ship, listing and apparently damaged, was towed into the River Tagus today by three tugs.

Nazi Workers Man Guns

Stockholm, July 30 (AP).—German soldiers manning antiaircraft guns and other aerial defense installations within Germany are being relieved by workers and will be sent to the fronts, Berlin dispatches to Sweden said today. The move reflects again the Nazi effort to get the most out of available manpower.

Australian Minister Home

Sydney, Australia, July 30 (AP). H. V. Evatt, minister for external affairs, said today on his return to Australia that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are "greatly attached to Australia" and "both are doing much for us."

Schutt Is Named National Committeeman

Wilmington, Del., July 30 (AP).—Harold S. Schutt of Wilmington was chosen by the Republican State Committee last night to be Republican national committeeman from Delaware.

He succeeds former United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings, who resigned to devote full time to legal work.

Schutt formerly was president of the board of directors of the department of public safety. He is a director of the Continental American Life Insurance Co., the Delaware Power & Light Co. and other firms.

Chinese Cut Railway North From Hangchow

Chungking, July 30 (AP).—A series of sustained Chinese attacks on Japanese garrisons in the vicinity of Hangchow, 100 miles southwest of Shanghai were disclosed by an army spokesman today.

Chinese troops at one point along the railway have cut traffic from Hangchow north, the spokesman said. They also were reported to have driven back a Japanese thrust from Wukang, northwest of Hangchow.

Strong Offensive To Strike at Vital Jap Defense Lines

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Navy Secretary Knox hinted yesterday present offensives in the Pacific are but the preliminary for long range attacks at ripping apart the main seams in the defenses of the Japanese empire.

While avoiding details of strategy, Secretary Knox told his press conference it would not be reasonable to expect the American forces in the Pacific to confine themselves to their present "island to base" method of hitting the Japanese.

"Helpful Hint" to Japan

He was asked whether the only alternative to the present method was to strike directly at some main joints in the Japanese defense lines, and he said that was good speculation, adding that "your speculation is as good as mine."

"It isn't reasonable to assume the present method is the one ultimately to be followed," said Knox. "Some island-to-base fighting must be done, but it isn't reasonable to assume the whole war will be fought that way."

It was the second "helpful hint" to the Japanese from official Washington within as many days. The President had warned by radio the Japanese had better start revising plans if they were counting on time to exploit their gains in the Pacific.

Knox was asked about the President's suggestion that in the Pacific "we have taken the initiative," and the Secretary said that was "very obvious."

"Our estimate," said Knox, "is the Japanese are losing combat and merchant ships at a much faster rate than they can replace them. If that is true they are having increasing difficulties with their lines of communication."

Tough Fighting Ahead

He denied, however, that it was reasonable to expect the Japanese to withdraw voluntarily from positions they now hold even when their supply lines are played out.

As an example he cited the drive on Munda.

"It's tough fighting on Munda," he said. "You recall the first 30 days on Guadalcanal and the extreme difficulty there. We are meeting the same kind of fanatic resistance at Munda. Few prisoners are being taken. The Japs die where they are rather than yield.

"You have to dig them out," said Knox, "and it's a slow and expensive process."

"We have complete control of the sea and of the air and yet the positions must be taken by the old method of throwing our infantry against theirs."

U. S. Prepares Lend-Lease Aid for Sicily

Copyright by New York Herald-Tribune's Washington Bureau

An order under which Sicily will become the first enemy territory to receive lend-lease aid from the United States has been drawn up and awaits President Roosevelt's signature upon final capitulation of the island, it was learned yesterday.

The pattern of lend-lease aid for civilian populations established in North Africa after they were liberated from the Germans is expected to be applied in enemy territory as well. It calls for transfer to civilian wholesalers and retailers within the territory, through the medium of their own government, of stocks to replenish shelves looted by the Axis armies. Cash from the sales by these dealers will accrue on lend-lease books, though it is not expected to balance the account.

Meanwhile, efforts by the State Department to fix a date for the United Nations conference on relief and rehabilitation were reported here to be plagued by a squabble raised among governments-in-exile in London over the handling of relief questions to date by the "Big Four" Allied powers. Led by the Netherlands, the governments-in-exile are expressing themselves as opposed to what they are terming an exclusion policy by the United States, Britain, Russia and China in the high policy councils on such matters. They will seek at the next conference to obtain equal status for one of their representatives in the decisions on relief and rehabilitation policy.

repeated his chicken-and-the-egg anology.

"Then you don't consider Badoglio a member of the Fascist Party?" he was asked.

The President said he was not dealing in personalities. A columnist went on the air and did that the other night, he said, but he was just expressing his own opinion. Mr. Roosevelt was referring to the columnist, whose remarks later were broadcast to Europe by OWI, who called Vittore Emanuele a "moronic little King" and then called both the King and Marshal Badoglio "Fascists."

U. S. Feeds Sicilians

Mr. Roosevelt also told about a cablegram he received the other night from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. He wanted to get it into his radio talk, but it came in too late. The message told what we were doing to feed and otherwise help the people in Sicily.

Food is being given the Sicilians out of Army rations and out of stock piles in North Africa. It includes sugar, flour, milk for the children, olive oil, meat and a great favorite of the Italians—pasta. Also they are being given generous amounts of medicine and soap.

Public health doctors, sanitary engineers and agricultural experts have gone into Sicily, the President said, and he told of efforts to help the islanders to organize their own resources. Wheat is an important crop, and it is now being harvested. To help in this, Mr. Roosevelt said Gen. Sir Harold Alexander has released certain Sicilian prisoners. Also, he said, we are sending oil to Sicily to help in milling the wheat.

The President thought all this ought to pay good dividends. Harvesting will be going on all through Italy in the next few weeks, and he hopes that the Italians will be able to keep their own crops, as they are now doing in Sicily, and not be compelled to turn them over to the Germans.

Knox Still Opposes Separate Air Chief

Navy Secretary Knox is opposed to having a separate chief of staff for air, as suggested yesterday by The Post in recommending that President Roosevelt reorganize his military team in Washington to correspond to Eisenhower's organization.

Secretary Knox, answering a question at his press conference, said the proposal was "reviewing the old question of a separate air force, to which I am opposed." He did not elaborate.

Enemy Submarine Sunk By British Destroyer

Capetown, Union of South Africa, July 30 (AP).—Sinking of a large enemy submarine near Capetown by the British destroyer Active was disclosed today.

The destroyer, carrying survivors of a torpedoed freighter, sighted the submarine at midnight at 1000 yards range. With every gun firing, the destroyer raced for the spot and caught the submarine with depth charges just below the surface. No survivors were picked up, but a three-and-a-half mile patch of oil revealed the U-boat's fate next day.

these increases was announced for canners yesterday for fruit cocktails, canned apricots, cherries, figs, peaches, pears, plums, fresh prunes, blueberries, blackberries, boysenberries, gooseberries and youngberries.

The increases allowed amount to fractional cents per pound and should mean "a cent or so" extra cost to the housewife, OPA officials said. Other 1943 canned foods than the subsidized vegetables accounting for 80 per cent of the pack — beans, peas, corn and tomatoes—will reflect similar increases, it was said.

Hatching Eggs Ceiling

Other food news during the day included:

1. Announcement from the Senate Committee on Small Business that the OPA will place specific dollar and cents ceiling prices on hatching eggs and baby chicks in the "immediate future."

The committee further revealed OPA had turned down its recommendation for an increase to 30 cents per pound from 28½ cents in the average price of chickens at farm levels to allow for increased production and feed costs.

In denying the increase OPA said the proposed price would reflect a return of approximately 158 per cent of parity to poultry raisers and provide a strain on the livestock industry by diverting more feed to poultry.

2. Announcement by the WFA of support prices to stimulate greater production of cottonseed oil, meal, and linters needed for war purposes. A minimum of $55 per ton for cottonseed was established, an increase of $6 per ton over last year's minimum support prices.

3. Sales and deliveries of selected seed potatoes to the WFA through September 15 were exempted from price control. The potatoes purchased will be used by the United States armed forces overseas and "by our Allies," OPA said, and purchases will be made only in select areas.

King Sent Officers To Bring Duce In, Turin Paper Says

Bern, July 30 (AP).—King Vittorio Emanuele was compelled to send army officers to bring Benito Mussolini to the palace when he asked his resignation, according to the Gazetta del Popolo of Turin.

The newspaper gave this version of events:

Mussolini, after the Fascist Grand Council voted against him Sunday, was supposed to go to the King to submit his resignation. Instead he went to an agricultural exhibition, where he distributed prizes.

Count Dino Grandi, ex-minister of justice, first arrived and asked the King, "Where is Mussolini?"

The King replied he did not know; then he dispatched officers to get him. When Mussolini was brought to the palace he told the King there "are only a few centers of resistance," which he said "could be easily eliminated."

The King answered, according to the Gazetta, "We think you had better resign."

Midsea Repair Enables Plane To Finish Hop

Forced down at sea, a naval air transport plane rode 20-foot waves for 42 hours until repairs were made, then flew on to Honolulu under its own power.

The Navy, releasing the story yesterday, said the plane was operated for the Transport Service by Pan American Airways, thus disclosing for the first time that Pan American is engaged in transport flights in the Pacific.

The plane, with a crew of 10 and 8 passengers, was forced down several hundred miles from Pearl Harbor. All but two of those aboard became violently seasick, and the first officer had to make the repairs because the engineering officers were too ill to take over.

Piloted by Capt. John H. Hamilton, San Francisco, the plane developed motor trouble while en route from an unnamed Pacific island to Honolulu. The port motor began blazing, but the flames were stopped before the ship landed on the swells.

Hamilton radioed for a new motor to replace the one which had forced the landing and for a bag of cement to plug a bad leak in the hull.

The repair equipment was flown to the disabled plane by another Naval Air Transport Service ship piloted by Assistant Chief Pilot Gordon T. Maxwell, Oakland, Calif.

Meantime, other planes, piloted by Capt. W. B. Biggers and Capt. Harry J. Beyer, both of San Mateo, Calif., circled over the disabled ship, to provide aid if necessary.

But it wasn't needed. First Officer William Saulsberry, under direction of First Engineer David E. Weeks, made the necessary repairs.

When a destroyer came up over the horizon to offer assistance, Lieut. Comdr. Thomas C. Peifer, Spartanburg, S. C., en route to Honolulu, remarked: "Wouldn't it be a hot one if it turned out to be my new destroyer?" It was.

Members of the crew of the disabled ship, all of whom live in California, were First Officer Saulsberry, Oakland; First Engineer Weeks, Lafayette; Second Officer-Navigator Wiley Umstead, Berkeley; Third Officer John D. Scouten, Oakland; Supernumerary Navigator James Helmer, Piedmont; Second Engineer Walter H. Elkins, San Francisco; Supernumerary Engineer Roy E. Welch, Berkeley; First Radio Officer Leroy D. Paulsen, Alameda; Second Radio Officer Ralph J. Lawn, San Francisco, and Flight Steward Ralph Flanigan, San Francisco.

Henry Ford Sees Much Work Ahead

Detroit, July 30 (INS).—Henry Ford celebrated his eightieth birthday today aboard one of his company's ore carriers, with Mrs. Ford en route to their summer lodge in the Huron Mountains in northern Michigan for a three-week vacation.

Before boarding the vessel, Ford said he didn't consider today the completion of his eightieth year, but rather the beginning of his eighty-first, with much work ahead of him.

Lady Astor Fined $240 in Ration Case

LADY ASTOR

By the Associated Press

London, July 30.—Lady Astor, a familiar figure in the House of Commons but not in police court, paid $240 in fine and costs in her first appearance in famed Bow Street today, on a charge of violating rationing regulations.

The Virginia-born member of Parliament pleaded guilty, but her attorney read a statement in which she said she was completely ignorant of any violation of the law when she wrote a letter to Lunsford P. Yandell, an American Red Cross employe, asking him to have his wife look into the possibility of buying a fur jacket and other garments for her in the United States.

Among other things, the letter said:

"A short-haired soft winter jacket sounds like heaven to me . . ."

It also listed silk stockings, gloves, evening shoes, a fur-collar dress, an evening gown and a white skirt as things the Red Cross man might bring back.

"I knew he would be returning by air and therefore no shipping space was involved," Lady Astor declared, in a statement read by her attorney.

"I had no idea I was doing anything wrong and certainly nothing to impede the war effort."

Magistrate Harold McKenna, agreeing she had acted in ignorance, said he fined her with regret.

Before appearing in court, Lady Astor made a speech in Commons on the topic of education. As she started to leave the House, Sir Richard Acland began an address on the same subject and remarked that he was sorry she was not remaining because he wanted to mention her in his talk.

Always ready for a parliamentary tussle, Lady Astor retorted glibly:

"If he is going to attack me, will he do it before I go? I have to go to Bow Street Court."

The peeress sailed out amid laughter.

U-Boat Downs Patrol Blimp

others in attacks on 11 undersea craft in the North Atlantic.

There have been no such stories of blimp victories over enemy submersibles but the place the blimps hold in antisubmarine warfare is indicated by the fact the Navy now has a program calling for a fleet of 200 of them. A year or less ago the total force called for was 48. A large part of the 200 have been built.

Whereas one of the airplane's most effective qualities in antisubmarine work is speed of attack once a U-boat is sighted, the blimp's most useful characteristic is its ability to pursue a quarry relentlessly.

The blimps have a top speed of about 65 miles per hour and a cruising speed of about 40 miles. At the slower rate they can carry enough gas for a voyage of about 2000 miles.

This ability to travel slowly over a submarine's real or suspected route of escape and to drop depth charges as necessary has made the blimp a valuable weapon. Naval aviation's boast is no convoy protected by blimps has ever lost a ship.

The blimps are made lighter than air by nonexplosive helium gas.

Hitler Sent Duce Nietzsche's Works For His Birthday

London, July 30 (AP).—The Berlin radio announced today that Adolf Hitler had sent Benito Mussolini the complete works of Nietzsche, specially printed and with a "cordial dedication by Hitler" as a sixtieth birthday present.

The broadcast said the books were delivered by Nazi Field Marshal Albert Kesselring. Presumably Mussolini was in custody when the present was delivered.

It was from Nietzsche, German philosopher who preached the creed of a super race, that Mussolini borrowed the motto:

"Live dangerously."

Nietzsche, who died in 1900, wrote:

"I am writing for a race of men which does not yet exist—for the lords of the earth."

Both Fascists and Nazis have drawn on his works in seeking justification of their tenets.

The Gas Case

Much more was at stake in the Washington Gas Light Co. case decided by the United States Court of Appeals for the District this week than the average increase of 3 cents a month in consumers' bills. The real issue was whether rate-regulating bodies should continue to perform their regular functions or whether a large share of their responsibility should be surrendered to the OPA. The Court concluded that Congress had no intention of authorizing the OPA to tell utility commissions how to run their particular segments of our governmental system. We do not see how the Court could have reached any other conclusion.

It is true that Congress, in the Inflation Control Act, authorized the President to stabilize prices and wages at the level of last September 15. But Congress had previously denied the OPA any control over utility rates, and in the Inflation Control Act it merely required that a representative of the Federal Government be given an opportunity to intervene and present its case against higher rates before increases could be made. The OPA attempted to use this right to force the Public Utilities Commission into making a sweeping investigation of the sliding scale by which the city's gas rates are determined each year. The PUC insisted on doing its job in its own way, and the Court upheld it in that action.

The unreasonableness of the OPA demand is suggested by the fact that the investigation leading to adoption of the sliding scale took 3½ years and cost $750,000. If an investigation aimed at abolition of the sliding scale or substantial modification of it should require half as much time, it would be grossly unfair to prevent operation of that arrangement in the meantime. At present, moreover, the PUC is conducting a major investigation into the sliding scale governing electricity rates and could not be expected to undertake a similar study of gas rates at the same time because of its limited staff.

We hope that the PUC will subject the sliding scale to the closest scrutiny in the case of both electricity and gas. But it would have prejudiced the case in the beginning if it had arbitrarily departed from this formula at the behest of the OPA. That agency is in no position to decide for local regulatory bodies what the scope of their investigations shall be. The very thought of upsetting all the rules by which rate-making has been governed in the past and setting out to find new formulas for every case during wartime is absurd in itself. The upshot of this local controversy, then, is to confirm the wisdom of Congress in leaving local rate-making powers undisturbed. The OPA may intervene and use its influence against inflationary rate increases, as it did in the local gas case, but to let it dictate the scope of every rate investigation would be a bid for chaos without having any substantial effect upon the advance of inflation.

Politics And Pensions

There is grave danger that the reply of Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, to the President's suggestion for postwar aid to soldiers and sailors may result in making a political issue of the problems presented by demobilization. The President doubtless laid himself open to Mr. Spangler's attack by the manner in which he presented his proposals and by a veiled hint that Congress might not be disposed to follow his lead. But the President's vulnerability does not excuse Mr. Spangler's ill-advised imputation that he was bidding for soldier votes to insure a fourth term. Such charges distract attention from the real merits of the suggested program by emphasizing its vote-getting potentialities.

The President reminded his press conference that the program outlined in his address had been set forth in a report of the ill-fated National Resources Planning Board. The main features of this program are not likely to encounter opposition either inside or outside Congress. Consequently, given the will, it should be comparatively easy for Democrats and Republicans working with one another and in cooperation with the Administration to agree upon a sound plan for the systematic demobilization and assisted placement of veterans of this war. If the issue is permitted to become a football of politics, however, we shall witness the sorry spectacle of Democrats and Republicans angling for soldier votes by outpromising one another, instead of concentrating upon a workable plan of action.

After reading the comments on the President's so-called bid for the soldier vote, many Americans must have experienced a recrudesence of the cynicism and disgust engendered by the prolonged political struggle over bonus payments to veterans of the last World War. The open bidding for former soldier votes that went on during those hectic years was a severe test of faith in the virtues of democracy and representative Government. It would be little short of disastrous to play politics with the soldier vote again, with the same disillusioning effect, and with the almost inevitable result of getting the kind of make-shift plan against which the President has warned us. After the last war we suffered severely because of the lack of a carefully planned program for assisting transition to a peacetime basis. The much greater scope of this war insures a proportionately higher degree of postwar suffering if we repeat the mistakes of the past. Mr. Spangler ought to bear these considerations in mind.

End The Snooping

Apparently the pendulum is swinging toward liberalization of gasoline rations in the Eastern States. The Petroleum Administration reports a large expansion of the facilities for moving oil overland to this area. We may assume also that much less gasoline shipped from American ports to the European theater of war is being lost at sea. To some extent these improvements may be offset by heavier demands of our war machine during the invasion of Europe. Yet the more optimistic tone of Petroleum Administrator Ickes' recent statement is a strong indication that more gasoline will soon be flowing into the tanks of civilian motorists.

Certainly the first restriction to be knocked out as the supply of gasoline increases is the foolish ban on pleasure driving. That ban has never been and never could be effectively enforced. It has brought the worst orgy of snooping into the private affairs of the people since the prohibition era. We doubt that the ban has saved any substantial amount of gasoline, but in any event it has proved to be more obnoxious than a further cut in the value of coupons would have been. The resentment of the people against being told what they may and may not do with the meager supply of gasoline allowed them is well known to the OPA. As we have said many times, it is like telling people how they should use any other rationed goods. So we may reasonably assume that it will take the first opportunity to correct this blunder.

Expectations of an increase in the value of gasoline rationing coupons have also been built up. Whether these hopes can be fulfilled must depend entirely upon the supply of gasoline that can be transported into this area after all military requirements have been met. We think that caution in making such changes is desirable. A sudden boost in coupon values followed by a reduction might be a greater blow to civilian morale than continuation of more rigid restrictions.

No argument should be needed to convince Americans that the burden of rationing gasoline, or any other commodity, should be distributed as evenly as possible. This does not necessarily mean that rationing should be uniform throughout the country. Where local supplies are plentiful without drawing upon the country's limited transport facilities for oil, there is no reason to make gasoline rationing any more severe than is necessary for the conservation of tires. But all available pipe lines, tankers and tank cars should certainly be used to even out the gasoline supplied to different parts of the country. Discrimination against any one section, when the means are at hand to end that discrimination, would be a strange policy for a great Nation fighting the cause of democracy.

War Criminals

President Roosevelt made an extremely significant pledge in the course of his Wednesday evening broadcast. Mussolini and his Fascist gang, he said, "will be brought to book and punished for their crimes against humanity. No criminal will be allowed to escape by the expedient of 'resignation.'" He intends the same doctrine to apply, no doubt to Hitler and his gang in Germany. This is a promise which cannot easily be executed. For the criminals are many and their crimes varied. Yet it is of real importance that every effort be made to fulfill this commitment precisely and in detail. And that such an effort will be made is apparent in Mr. Roosevelt's further request to the neutral countries not to give them hospitality.

Punishment of the guilty is an accepted principle of democratic justice. In respect to the Axis war criminals, it has its justification not merely as a means of retribution but also for the sake of example, as a deterrent to would-be dictators in the future. The stern fixing of guilt in accordance with law, moreover, affords a means of channeling the hatred which has been engendered among the victims of Axis tyranny. Unchecked, this hatred might vent iself in such indiscriminate brutality and vengeance as to plunge all Europe into chaos and make impossible the establishment of any just and enduring peace.

There has been of late considerable loose and unreflective talk about the desirability of a general blood-letting in the enemy countries once they have been overcome. Such nonsense is ammunition for Hitler, who would like his people to believe that they can expect neither justice nor mercy from the United Nations. And it is also a callous negation of the principles we are fighting to preserve. Insofar as we behave like Fascists, we shall become Fascists. If we burn and hang and kill, or condone the commission of such deeds by others, we shall undermine our own institutions through our disrespect for them. "The United Nations," declared Mr. Roosevelt, "will not follow the pattern set by Mussolini and Hitler and the Japanese for the treatment of occupied countries—the pattern of pillage and starvation."

In some measure, to be sure, all of the enemy peoples who supported their dictatorial governments share in their guilt. As Winston Churchill observed, "There can be no really valid defense for any people which allows its freedom and inherent rights to pass out of its own hands." But guilt is relative. In large part these people have themselves been victims of the tyrannies they helped to sustain—victims, too, of the economic and social conditions which spawned the totalitarian regimes.

Civilized society has devised procedures for the determination of guilt and for the assessment of punishment in accordance with the magnitude of the crime. If we are to remain civilized, we must adhere to these procedures. This means that war criminals must be charged with specific misdeeds, confronted by the witnesses and the evidence against them, given opportunity to plead in their own defense. In large part it will be feasible and desirable to have them tried by courts of law in their own countries. For the Nazi and Fascist leaders have been gross violators of German and Italian laws; they established themselves in power only by scrapping the constitutions of their countries. Other Axis gangsters will have to be tried, perhaps, in the countries where, as gauleiters or Gestapo agents, they perpetrated their atrocities. For a few it may be necessary to set up some special court of international law operating under the authority of the Allied governments.

The important point to be borne in mind is that we come as deliverers, for the purpose of establishing law and order and a decent regard for human rights. We can establish these only by scrupulously observing them ourselves. The manner in which we deal with those who are responsible for this frightful war will be the first test of our devotion to the principles we avow. And it will determine the temper in which the whole world will approach the problems of reconstruction.

WLB Warning

The WLB has sounded a new note in its latest warnings against the evils of inflation. "If the clamor for an inflationary policy prevails," said George W. Taylor, WLB vice chairman, "it will not only be more difficult to win the war but the postwar problems will be made threateningly difficult." Heretofore chief emphasis has been laid on the immediate evils of inflation, especially the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar and the consequent reduction in the real value of wages in terms of goods and services. The damage done by inflation cannot be judged, however, solely by what happens while a war is in progress. We could, in fact we have, experienced a very large amount of wage inflation without a corresponding rise in prices. For reasons of patriotism and because many kinds of consumer goods are unobtainable, workers are less inclined at present to spend their excess earnings. As a result, cash savings are piling up rapidly and will be available for use after the war. It is then that we shall face a major reckoning, if we do not call a halt to this inflationary kind of accumulation.

It was some time after the conclusion of World War I before the inflationary boom reached its peak, only to be followed by a catastrophic collapse of prices and wages, and widespread unemployment. A subsequent industrial revival did not benefit farmers, loaded with fixed debt charges incurred when prices of agricultural products were at record heights. The result was chronic agricultural distress, extensive foreclosures of farm mortgages and an epidemic of bank failures. Yet the inflationary purchasing power that was a legacy of World War I was modest by comparison with that now being created.

No matter what we do from this time forth to keep down prices and wages, there is going to be a tremendous adjustment problem awaiting us when peace is declared. We should be thinking now how to avert those future inflationary dangers which seem nearer as the war approaches a climax. The postwar problem will be twofold: (1) How to avoid more inflation and (2) how to make sure at the same time that capital is available to finance the reconversion of industry to a peacetime basis. The dual task of discouraging unwise consumption outlays and encouraging desired capital expenditures will be greatly facilitated if we succeed during the remaining months or years of the war in keeping prices and wages in stable equilibrium.

IN A PORTENTOUS WORLD

Today I find no reassurance here
Upon this greening path where now I stand,
Aghast and alien on long-loved land
True, it is spring, and bough and leaf appear
Miraculous in this as any year,
I hold the fault not mine, nor in my hand,
Since joy, like love, is not mine to command,
Nor mine to welcome song, however dear.
For now I know this wood shall never yield
Me cover! These familiar trees are tall,
Yet frail as I. Nowhere shall I be sealed
Again from harm, and nowhere shall I crawl
Away again, neither in wood nor field,
In a portentous world, grown fierce and small.

Argentine Denial

ARGENTINA'S NEW revolutionary government has catapulted itself back onto the front pages in recent days by two actions. In appointing "interventors" to take over six American factories they aroused a brief uneasiness as to what their intentions were. Second, they have themselves been so stung by foreign newspaper reports that they are going fascist that they have issued an official denial.

The seizure of American factories blew over Wednesday when the "interventors" backed out with apologies. The new regime is pushing a campaign against black-marketing and the clamp-down on American companies is said to be a move to show the Argentine public how thorough the federal investigators are.

The government denial that they intend to set up a fascist state was evoked by a dispatch from Mendoza, Argentina, by John White, New York Herald Tribune representative at Santiago de Chile, calling the new regime's political declarations "anti-Semitic, anti-Communist, anti-foreign and above all, anti-American."

New Government

The new government's postponement of elections, its rule by decree from a cabinet that is really a military junta, its suppression of pro-American organizations and of civil liberties, all expose it to comparison with fascist regimes. The recent burning of supposedly communist books adds familiar color. Delay in breaking relations with the Axis is another factor.

The Argentines are a very proud people and extremely sensitive about being misunderstood in the foreign press. The official explanation of what looks to be like open dictatorship is that strong measures are needed to clean up the corruption of the Castillo regime. Shocking scandals have been uncovered, among them a 10-million-dollar graft deal involving Buenos Aires subways.

On foreign policy, Argentines trying to explain or justify the role of the Ramirez regime emphasize that they have promised to break relations. Just when, nobody ventures to say.

They explain why Argentina has not broken relations in these terms:

First, they point out that Argentina has the old political tradition that her destiny is bound to Europe. Many times, beginning as far back as the 1860's, when Spain attacked Peru—and Chile and Ecuador banded with Peru in defense—Argentina has refused to make commitments that would automatically take her into war to defend the hemisphere. This is her version of "no entangling alliances."

Second, they point out that Argentina can hold aloof from the defense problems of the New World because she is very nearly independent of it economically.

Produces Corn

She produces far more corn, wheat, meat, flax, wool and many minerals than she needs. In peace her surpluses go to Europe. In war, the New World has to buy at her counter. She knows we will always send her essential imports because her exports are badly needed in waging war. So why not stay out of war and do business, her policy-makers have reasoned.

Third, apologists insist that if Argentina had broken relations, the Axis would have sunk her ships and involved her in war. This did happen to Brazil and Mexico.

Argentines who do not want us to get the new regime wrong sum it up this way: It is not that they like the Axis more or us less, but that they love Argentina exclusively.

This Argentine doctrine was called prudent neutrality under the Castillo regime, but since the Ramirez government is justifying its domestic policies on the grounds that the Castillo setup was corrupt, they have changed the name. They call it "true nationalism."

Following a stay in Argentina in late 1941 this writer was among the first American journalists to warn of the need for us to exercise control and understanding in judging Argentina's course. And I have consistently found in American spoken and written opinion the exercise of greatest patience. Since January, 1942, we have been promised that Argentina would break relations. We wanted relations broken at Rio to cut off Axis channels of espionage, propaganda and sabotage against us in a war for survival.

Bewildering, contradictory things keep on happening in Argentina, yet we are still asked not to misunderstand. We try not to. But sensitive Argentines must accept the fact that their role is to us in very great contrast to that played by the New World countries now involved in war as result of breaking relations when we were stabbed in the back and the going was tough. And if our comprehension does not prove limitless, Argentines should charge it off as part of the price of their security and peace while those of us who are both in and of the New World are fighting to defend it.

No Half-Way Stage

By Barnet Nover

Marshal Badoglio's Dilemma

THE CENTRAL FACT of the Italian situation today is that while it is a simple matter for a neutral to become a belligerent it is, under existing circumstances, impossible for a belligerent to become a neutral.

Italy was neutral for a period of nine months following the outbreak of war in Europe and the Allies made many concessions to her, and were prepared to make more, to keep her neutral.

Then Mussolini pushed a button, and presto, the Italians found themselves at war. But Marshal Badoglio cannot, by pushing a button, restore Italian neutrality.

THAT, NO DOUBT, is what he would like to do, what King Victor Emmanuel would like to do, what the overwhelming majority of Italians are extremely eager to have happen. They want to be quit of the war. They want the clock turned back to June 9, 1940. They want peace.

But peace in the sense they mean it—an end of fighting, an end of bombing, an end to the exactions and privations and miseries of war—is something they cannot have at this stage in the European struggle, at least not altogether.

The Italians can only have such peace when the German menace has been eliminated and peace has been restored to all of Europe.

IN OTHER WORDS, the choice facing Italy today is not a choice between belligerency and neutrality, between war and peace, but between helping Germany and helping the Allies.

So no matter what Marshal Badoglio does is bound to disappoint and disillusion and probably embitter a large section of the Italian people.

For Italy to continue carrying out her commitments to the Axis would mean more military defeats, more bombing of Italian cities, more destruction, more devastation.

On the other hand, for Italy to surrender unconditionally to the Allies would mean bringing down upon her head the wrath of Hitler. In either case Italy would continue to be a battlefield, which she became on July 10, when Allied troops landed in Sicily.

UNQUESTIONABLY that is a major reason why Marshal Badoglio has been so loath to arrive at a decision regarding Italy's future role in the war. Yet the longer he delays, the more the situation inside the kingdom threatens to get out of hand.

If the alternatives facing Badoglio are unpleasant they are not equally unpleasant. In the first place, the Allies are now in a position to send more troops into Italy than Germany can spare for that purpose, to do far more damage to Italy if she remains on the side of the Axis than Germany can do if Italy quits her erstwhile partner.

In the second place, the Allies are in a position, once Italy agrees to surrender, to defend Italy against Germany better than Germany has proved that she can defend Italy against the Allies.

And, thirdly, the Allies can do infinitely more for the Italian people than Germany has shown any capacity or disposition to do.

IN THIS CONNECTION Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's manifesto to the Italian people is of very great importance. For it brings home to the individual Italian the immediate benefits he himself and his family will derive from unconditional surrender.

Not only would the Allies then be in a position to drive the Germans out of Italy, but the Italian troops taken prisoner in Sicily and Tunisia would be returned to their homeland and to their peacetime pursuits.

We can assume from this that the Allies do not plan to employ the armed forces of Italy in the war against Germany. If such a development does ultimately occur, it will only be, as it can only be, because the Italians themselves favor it.

In the meantime, however, the Allies will be in a position to employ Italy as a base of operations against the Reich and its remaining satellites.

THERE IS AN URGENT note in Eisenhower's manifesto which should not escape us. The Allied commander in chief is obviously anxious to have the Italians surrender as soon as possible, not because we are in no position to force her to surrender, which we are, but because the longer Italy delays the more chaos is likely to spread in the kingdom.

Furthermore, the longer Italy delays reaching a decision the more the Germans may entrench themselves in the Po Valley, Istria and elsewhere for a last-ditch fight. But that decision cannot be delayed very much longer.

In due course the Italians will discover that they can hasten the return of real peace by helping in the destruction of Nazi might. The decision actively to help the Allies they will have to make themselves. In the meantime the least we can expect of them is that they help us at least passively.

Home Front

"Civilian" writes you (Post July 20) about the "enormous amount of merely random, aimless, unnecessary sightseeing travel by men in uniform." He continues with "the naive notion that every uniformed man on a train or bus is headed straight for Sicily, or home to see his dear old mother, is strictly the bunk." I think the kind of selfishness disclosed by this letter, is unpatriotic to the nth degree.

We ask "Civilian" whether if he found himself in the service, with a couple of days leave, not perhaps enough time to permit that trip home to mother, wife or sweetheart, if he wouldn't take a little "junket" to some nearby town or city?

We Americans back home, some of us, want everything, literally the moon. We want victory, not at any price, but easily, comfortably, and with all the trimmings, of roast beef, steak, vacation gasoline, tanks of fuel oil and no rationing. We want transportation de luxe on peacetime lines. We don't want the inconvenience of war. Even now some people still think only of "business as usual."

No "Civilian" (and I am one too, with a brother who is a captain in the North African operations), I don't agree with you. Travel is not what it used to be, but neither is the world. We didn't ask for this chaos, it's true, but if we do believe in the spirit of America, the spirit behind our men overseas, and those waiting to be sent let's be cooperative. Let's cut out the selfishness, bickering over small items, grousing at this temporary discomfort and that, and help win the war. The uniform automatically indicates that a man may be sent to his death for his country. Why can't the civilian dress mean a spirit of unselfish, intelligent cooperation on the home front?

King Victor Emmanuel

You deserve the thanks of the Nation for clearing the air of a lot of hokum about the King of Italy. It is good to know that at least one newspaper does not take the American public for a bunch of baboons. Surely even the State Department career boys must know we see through the phoney build-up of King Victor Emmanuel as an "antifascist."

I noticed the reply of Sue Ruffin Tyler to my letter in which I asked to know what she had written to the Britisher and why he should have written concerning the Bixby Letter, "I am sure you will be glad to know etc." She has not given a full account of her letter but I can gather why the gentleman wrote that she would be glad to know that the story was pure myth. No doubt her letter was rather gossipy, Mrs. Bixby being shown up in all her infamy and perhaps the demigod also suffered a bit.

She opines that my astonishment might get out of bounds if I knew all. I can assure her that I know most of the dirt. Isn't it too bad that I cannot be astonished. But I am ashamed. Evidently from E. Sewell's letter, which you publish, Sue Ruffin Tyler will have to write to the librarian at the Bodlean in order that that great institution suffer no defilement. It might be more reasonable to attack the literary quality of the letter, which perhaps does not exist but is a mere fancy of an ignoramus like myself. C. F. MAGEE.

Delinquent Children

Much is being said about delinquent parents, but nothing is stressed about the children being the cause of their own delinquency. We are told we must coddle them and make them happy. It is about time the children stood on their own two feet when they are taken into court. They should acknowledge their own errors. No doubt there are some cases when the parents are entirely at fault. However, in most cases they have done a fine job in training their children.

Do not our judges have even a slight knowledge of applied psychology? Do they not know that a delinquent child is eager to seize the slightest excuse for wrong-doing in order to keep on in the same course? The child's own future is at stake. Let him see that he has done wrong, that he should turn from the path he has been following. Let him see higher goals in front and be encouraged in efforts to reach them.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Skepticism Of A WAC

All-Out Arlene is pretty skeptical about Mussolini's resignation. "Nobody can tell me that it was in any way voluntary," she declares. "Do peacocks turn mudhens overnight? Did you ever hear of the steam-calliope player suddenly whipping out a harp and playing 'Hearts and Flowers'?"

"Benito was not the type to ring down his own curtain, suspend his own radio performance or ask for a rear table at the floor show voluntarily, if you ask me," continued Arlene. "Glorifying himself was his chief industry. He would only quit if scared. And how would quitting ease his fears?"

Nellie Shaw, a sister WAC, suggested that nothing should scare Benito more than the prospect of suddenly becoming plain Mr. B. Mussolini, "ring-the-top-floor-bell and-ask-for-Butch."

"That's just it," said All-Out Arlene. "With his uniform off, no plume in his hat, wearing bedroom slippers for patent-leather boots and without enough authority left to make the waiter put a head on the beer, what a spot he is in."

"Once a big drip like that turns in his badge, he is just another traffic violator and he must have known it," said Nellie Shaw. In this opinion she was supported by Wanda, the Sousaphonist.

"Either it's all window dressing or he was thrown out," went on Arlene.

"Somebody threw a wet blanket over the big cabbage-head, pushed him into a cedar chest, shoved down the cover and slapped an 'Opened-by-mistake' sign on it," said Nellie Shaw. "And it could have been Hitler. You don't mean to tell me you see anything convincing in that King Milquetoast-Marshal Hotdoglio setup."

"The King may not be the wash-out he has seemed," argued Arlene. "What chance did he ever have of outtalking Bumptious Bennie?"

"He isn't even every other inch a King," sneered Nellie." If he is a monarch, Charlie McCarthy is the Shape of Things to Come. No top-flight King ever carried the water bucket on the third team 21 years before without a protest."

"After all these years of Mussolini, it may seem too, too wonderful for words to the Italian people to have a ruler around who has a narrow chest, a weak voice, a record for keeping his mouth shut and no yen for anything more than getting back to the good old days when nobody used amplifiers," remarked Arlene.

"Maybe you've got something," admitted Nellie Shaw. "I suppose if you've taken orders from a barracuda 21 years it would seem swell to change to a guppy."

"In a way, I'm sorry to see the big ham go," said Arlene. "I was sort of counting on him being around at the finish so we women could have given him the business. He fooled a lot of men but his type was never anything but a laugh to a woman. We see through his kind with one eye open."

"And the other one under treatment for myopia," added Nellie.

Maybe that Badoglio edict prohibiting the gathering of more than three persons anywhere in Italy is primarily to put a stop to any attempts of Benito Mussolini, the world conqueror, from calling up Il Duce and arranging for a joint chat with plain Mr. B. Mussolini, the retired printer.

OPA Professors

Behind the current controversy over the "professors" in OPA lies the question of their point of view and intent in administering price control.

A businessman is favorably disposed toward high prices and rising prices. To him they spell prosperity and profits, and maximum profits are his business. It is also his business to advance the interests of his own company even at the expense of its rivals. His experience is seldom industry-wide. As a price administrator his point of view would almost certainly not extend much beyond his own company, and his intent would inevitably be to excuse a continued rise in prices.

A "long-haired theorist," on the other hand, starts from the premise that price control means nonrising prices, and considers it his business to act in the interest of the consumer, the general public and the biggest consumer of all, the Government. Only among disinterested economists can competent men with an industry-wide point of view be found. The intent of such men as price administrators would be to substitute fair and equitable prices for "the business drive toward "all the traffic will bear."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Captains Of Their Souls

FOR AN answer to the deepest questions of policy which face us in dealing with our enemies, and also with our friends, we must return for guidance to the first and last things of our spiritual heritage. Let us not shrink from the moral effort. For this is the hour of decision. It is the most fateful moment of our lives, and only if we believe truly can we hope to think clearly and then to act effectively.

LIPPMANN

THE FUNDAMENTAL question, which faces us everywhere, and in many forms, has to do with the nature of man, and most precisely it is whether adult men and women are to be regarded as having that freedom of the will which makes them personally responsible for their conduct. The supreme heresy of our enemies is that they have carried ruthlessly to the logical conclusion the denial of man's personal responsibility, and therefore of his human dignity.

In the fascist philosophy the individual is nothing, "the state" is everything and absolute; as a result, as Father Lopez said in a broadcast from Vatican City on Wednesday in which he spoke for the Pope: there are "those who dare to place the fortunes of whole nations in the hands of one man alone, a man who as such is the prey of passions, errors, and dreams." In the Nazi philosophy, too, the individual is nothing, but the tribe to which he belongs is absolute, and the predestined master of the earth. The root of the heresy is the rejection of the central conviction of our civilization: that man is a person, and therefore inviolable, and therefore, responsible.

OUR RESPONSE to this heresy usually takes the form of asserting the rights of men and of nations against the arbitrary tyrants and their adherents. But this is only the negative and partial aspect of the truth. For men are not really free when they are released from bondage. They are only freed men. They are not free men until they are the captains of their souls and know that they themselves have the power and the duty to choose between good and evil.

The distinction is crucial.—If we bear it in mind we shall not make the moral error of saying to the Italians or the Germans or to anyone else: you were all the innocent victims of the tyrants whom you obeyed. That is a pernicious sentimentality which denies man's moral responsibility. Nor shall we say to them: because you obeyed these tyrants, you and your children are one and all congenitally and forever cursed. That is the damnable heresy of our enemies which denies the inviolability of the human soul, or in the ancient language of faith, the fatherhood of God. Nor shall we say: leave it to us and we shall give you back liberty. That is the moral blindness and the intellectual error of not knowing that freedom is personal responsibility. Nor shall we say: surrender, and we shall stuff freedom down your throats at the point of the bayonet. That is a doctrinaire self-righteousness which makes freedom meaningless and odious.

THE TRUE view is the ancient view that men are responsible for their acts of commission and of omission, and that therefore the adult German and Italians are accountable for the acts of their governments. This is the rule of justice, which comes first, in the restoration of order. Far from being inhuman, it is a recognition of the humanity of our enemies. For no one who uses words exactly speaks of justice except among adult human beings who are in possession of their faculties. We treat animals, children, the insane, with kindness. But justice we invoke only among responsible men.

The rule of justice, which is primary, is then tempered with mercy, which stems at last from the knowledge that we too are sinners, and must therefore give to others what we must ask for ourselves.

Finally, mercy becomes illuminated with grace, which in the dealing of men with other men in the world, means that there is in each man an indestructible essence by which he can by repentance and reparation redeem himself. Thus, in the golden words which the Salvation Army has so often offered to the stricken: a man may be down but he is never out.

THESE CONSIDERATIONS are not remote from practical policy. They are the very considerations to which we must hold firmly if we are not to become lost in a maze of sophistry and improvised casuistry. It is an awful responsibility that we hold in our hands the overwhelming force which now we wield, and we must not be unworthy of it. We must not descend to the notion that any catch-as-catch-can opinion about how to exercise such power is realistic and humane, and that to remember and to examine the issues for which men are dying is inconvenient and too much trouble.

The constant knowledge must be with us that our power, like all power, is good only within the moral order. Therefore, when we send forth our men to kill or be killed, let us not in moral inertia and laziness of spirit refuse the effort of making sure that their battles are not meaningless and their sacrifices are not vain.

3 Had Been Missing

Four Washington men, three of them officers who had previously been listed as missing in action, were yesterday reported by the Navy Department to be prisoners of the Japanese in the Philippines.

FRALEIGH

Among 393 men reported interned were: Lieut. Claud Mahlon Fraleigh, Dental Corps, husband of Mrs. Genevieve Matilda Fraleigh, with Coast Guard public relations office here; Machinist's mate, second class, Lawrence Irving Freeman, brother of Mrs. Joseph Feingold, 2511 Fourteenth Street Northeast; Lieut. Comdr. Harold Ruppert Lehmann, Supply Corps, whose three sisters and brother reside here, and Comdr. Warner Philip Portz, husband of Mrs. W. P. Portz of 3515 R Street Northwest.

Fraleigh, who had been listed as missing for more than a year, left for Philippines duty in July, 1940, and served at the Naval Hospital at Cavite. Shortly after war was declared, he became Mess and Transportation Officer for General MacArthur and was cited in Frank Hewitt's "Men in White on Bataan." On August 9, 1942, he received the Silver Star for his operations.

Attended Loyola

Fraleigh, who spent most of his life in Gulfport, Miss., attended Loyola University and the University of Mississippi before practicing dentistry in Gulfport and Plaquemine, La. Entering the Navy August 15, 1938, he was first stationed at the Navy Department here. Mrs. Fraleigh joined the Coast Guard Women's Reserve in March.

Freeman was born March 28, 1916, in Worcester, Mass., where his father, Henry Freeman, now lives.

PORTZ LEHMANN

After attending high school there, he went to the U. S. Diesel School at Boston. He entered the Navy in December, 1939, and went on duty in the Philippines in July, 1940.

A Washington native, Lehman attended the Peabody School and McKinley Training School here. In 1917 he was appointed acting paymaster in the Navy and in 1934 became a paymaster with the rank of lieutenant commander. His assignments included duty here with the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts. In April, 1940, he was transferred to the Sixteenth Naval District at Cavite in the Philippines.

Family in Newport

His wife, Mrs. Mary Lehmann, and daughter, Betty, reside in Newport, R. I., while a son, Herbert, is with the Army Air Corps. Three sisters and a brother reside here: Mrs. C. I. Bean and Miss Marie Lehmann, both of 4617 Eighth Street Northwest; Mrs. R. E. Powell, 620 Gallatin Street Northwest, and C. L. Lehmann, 522 Jefferson Street Northwest.

Portz, a native of Newcomerstown, Ohio, attended the University of Ohio before entering the U. S. Naval Academy. Commissioned in 1915, he served on destroyer escort duty during the first World War. After studying electrical engineering at the Naval Academy and Columbia University, he was later made port director at Manila in June, 1940. A son, Warner, jr., is a premedical student at Georgetown University.

Others Interned

Also reported interned were the following:

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 30.—Should the 1944 Presidential candidates be Roosevelt on the Democratic ticket and Wendell Willkie on the Republican, Roosevelt's greatest worry would be the vote of the Nation's farmers.

Although Willkie is actually not the number one choice at this time among Republican farmers for the G. O. P. nomination, being less popular with that group than Governor Dewey of New York, nevertheless in a race against Roosevelt today Willkie would garner a larger share of the farm vote than he did in 1940.

Moreover, among farm voters in the vitally important Mid-Western section and elsewhere outside the solid South, Willkie runs ahead of Roosevelt today.

The attitude of the Nation's farmers toward a Roosevelt-Willkie race was sounded in a presidential "trial heat" survey by the Institute in which farm voters were asked:

"If the presidential election were held today, and Roosevelt were running for President on the Democratic ticket against Willkie on the Republican ticket, how do you think you would vote?"

The results, and a comparison with the 1940 vote, follow:

FARMERS

	Roosevelt	Willkie
1940	54%	46%
Today	50	50

The President, in other words, has lost political support among the farmers since 1940, while Willkie has gained.

Among farmers questioned by the Institute approximately one out of every six (16 per cent) was undecided. Most of the ones in the undecided group who voted in 1940 favored Willkie over Roosevelt. If this past voting behavior is any criterion of what the middle-of-the-road farm group will do next year, the Republicans would seem to stand a better chance of winning their vote than the Democrats.

Farm defection from the New Deal was evidenced as far back as 1936 and was accelerated in the 1940 election, when the G. O. P. made substantial inroads upon Democratic strength in the farm areas outside the South.

The relative standing of Roosevelt and Willkie today with farmers north of the Mason-Dixon line is shown as follows in the survey. Note that Willkie holds a majority.

FARMERS OUTSIDE SOUTH

Roosevelt	48%
Willkie	52

June Arms Output Off

Overoptimism Assailed

By Edwin D. Gritz

Post Staff Writer

WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson assailed overoptimism and other war production obstacles yesterday in reporting that the June output of munitions failed to meet scheduled goals in the face of rising demands from the armed services.

Stressing that Government and industry will need to resort to every means of intensifying the production effort, Nelson declared:

"Such obstacles to increased production as absenteeism, strikes, delays by management in utilizing full capacity, overoptimism which reduces working energies—such obstacles must be vigorously attacked with every instrument at our disposal."

Total Volume Off

While pointing out that the total output in June gained somewhat over May, Nelson emphasized that June's end showed that only 43 per cent of the total volume of munitions requirements currently scheduled for 1943 had actually been produced.

"In view of the large month-by-month rise in schedule requirements during the next six months," he said, "the average monthly output must be 30 per cent higher than the average output during the preceding six months."

The June progress report, compared to May, showed:

Aircraft production increase 3 per cent, but fell "considerably short" of expectations. Total acceptances, while more than 7000, rose only slightly in number. Causes for the poor showing were interruption to production because of design changes, faulty performance of certain parts, labor shortage.

Ship Deliveries Down

Merchant ship deliveries in June were down about 100,000 deadweight tons from the May record of 1.8 million. This program is expected to meet all 1943 objectives. Cumulative deliveries of merchant vessels of all types for the half year amounted to 8,675,000 deadweight tons, of which 8,450,000 tons were of major types.

Ground ordnance was lagging in some segments. Ammunition, however, is largely abundant. Certain technical problems still remain to be overcome in producing components which may be limiting particular types of ammunition.

Naval vessels delivered reached a new peak of 229,457 displacement tons, which was 13 per cent above May. On an estimated value-put-in-place basis, there was a small decrease.

D. C. Exodus Feared

Group Warns Of Victory Stampede

A sudden exodus from Washington of Government war workers at the close of the war must be avoided at all costs if the country is going to provide successfully for readjustment and reemployment, a special 12-man presidential committee warned yesterday.

Such a "stampede from Washington" occurred at the end of the last war, the committee pointed out.

"A plan should be made by the Government to provide for continuity of operation of the war emergencies agencies during the transition from war to peace," the report said.

Larger Problem Now

"The problem of this transition is larger and more involved than it was in the case of the last World War. The sudden, if not the inevitable loss of key officials and of large numbers of employes at the close of the war is certain to be an embarrassment to the Government unless adequate provision is made to offset it. Unless such measures are taken, the results to the readjustment and reemployment program could be very serious."

The committee made the following recommendation to encourage needed Government workers to stay on after the end of the war:

"The Government should ascertain which individuals in the various war agencies desire and are qualified to remain in the service of the Government as a career.

Selecting Key Persons

"From among these persons, key individuals should be selected in each agency, and so placed that they can acquire a full understanding of the business of the agency and its methods of work, with a view to continuing the operations of the agency after the termination of the war in accordance with the then existing need, and to liquidating and terminating the agency or assisting in the transfer of portions of its work into the regular continuing agencies of Government."

Government workers employed in Government arsenals and Navy yards should be treated as industrial warworkers, the committee suggested, given the same consideration that is provided for them.

"At the close of World War I when the unexpected armistice was suddenly announced," the report said, "large numbers of Government warworkers abandoned their jobs. It would be wrong to refer to the movement as a release from Government employment—it was more in the nature of a stampede from Washington.

"Many large and important wartime offices were left deserted or operated only with a bewildered skeleton crew. Leading officials as well as run of the mill employes left in speedy search for peacetime employment.

"The resulting confusion in Government service was indescribable, and the damage to readjustment great. The termination of war contracts took place in an atmosphere of confusion and often of ignorance of the basic facts, and other Government operations were almost equally handicapped."

The report observed that it was unlikely that dollar-a-year men and other key war agency officials "will be able for any considerable period after the termination of the conflict to resist the pressure to return to their own businesses and employments."

Quick, Willing Help Is Typical Of America, Charwomen Say

By Mary Spargo

Post Staff Writer

It could only happen here.

At least the charwomen feel that the quick, generous and vigorous response of the public to stories which revealed that they must return out of their meager salaries overpayments which arose from an error on the part of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing is typical of America.

One charwoman, Mrs. Jenny Gray of 1004 Sixth Street Southeast, Negro, who supports a blind daughter, 18 years old, said yesterday that America is the only country in the world where strangers would demand that aid be given these charwomen.

Mrs. Gray's fellow workers agreed. They know how much she—and they—need their money. Mrs. Gray's daughter has been blind since she was 4 years old. It takes a lot of figuring to care for a blind child on a salary of $62 a month. It takes still more figuring if you must make payments of $9 a month, because some superior official made a mistake and graded you too high.

Rose B. Tyler of 4510 Fortieth Street Northeast, knows something about managing, too. She cares for a sister who is hopelessly incapacitated.

Mrs. Flossie Bowen of 412 Fifth Street Southeast could tell a lot of people about managing money. She put her daughter through Howard University on her earnings as a charwoman. One son is in the Army now but another child is still home.

The charwoman points with greatest pride to one of their number, Mrs. Agnes Hawkins of 4609 Meade Street Northeast. She has six children. Her coworkers maintain it takes a lot of scrubbing to support that brood.

From several sections of the city yesterday came contributions to the "Charwomen's Club" suggested by a War Production Board official in order to help the women pay back the Government.

Ruth Balch of the Library of Congress sent in her contribution with this message:

"Having more than enough for myself, am more than glad to do this and more if you need it."

Sarah L. Yarnall of 1614 Seventeenth Street Northwest sent $10. She said:

"I want to do what I can to prevent these women from having to use any of their precious earnings to pay up a debt caused by someone else's mistake."

An anonymous contribution of $5 came from a Sixteenth Street resident who wrote:

"Many thanks for the opportunity to contribute to this worthy cause."

An anonymous gift came from the Hotel Harrington.

That the public is determined by some method to relieve these women is evidence in other letters and telephone calls.

Nancy Taylor of 1731 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest wants to know if the Post is going "to stand idly by while those poor charwomen have to pay for an error made by the Government.''

The error certainly was on the part of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. Last August Congress passed pay raise legislation. The bureau thought it applied to their charwomen who had been receiving 65 cents an hour. Accordingly each one was sent a Civil Service notice setting her pay at 78 cents an hour. This month the bureau, through a ruling of the Comptroller General, discovered officials had misinterpreted the legislation. The Government said the women must pay the money back. These women, practically all middle aged, have family responsibilities. They had spent the money, so now it is being deducted.

Meanwhile a solution for the problem will be offered today to Treasury officials by Local 11, United Federal Workers of America, C. I. O., to which some of the women belong. The union will ask that the Treasury Department make no deduction from the women's paycheck until Congress returns from its recess, and that at that time the department request Congress to pass a private relief bill granting the women money to cover the overpayments.

The union points out that if a private employer attempted the procedure which the Government has begun in relation to these women, he would be acting illegally and the employes could seek relief in the courts. Until after final conference of the union and Treasury Department official, The Post will continue to hold all funds in the names of the donors, to be returned if the Treasury accedes to the union request.

Roosevelt Scoffs at Charge Of Bidding for Soldier Vote

President Roosevelt scoffed yesterday at charges he was playing 1944 politics in his Wednesday night broadcast. The charges were leveled by Republicans who demanded space on the Government's official news lines to the armed forces in order to present their accusations that he was bidding for the soldier vote.

The Chief Executive, with a laugh, brushed aside a request at his press-radio conference for comment on what his questioner called the "speculation as to the political portent" of his address in which he outlined a postwar demobilization plan of benefits for those in the armed forces.

Mr. Roosevelt said someone at the White House had inquired why he not take a different tack in his next speech and devote a paragraph or two to saying that the moon is beautiful. But it was suggested, he said, that he would be accused of playing politics because a lot of young people like to sit out under the moon.

However, as the dispute continued over how his address should be interpreted, immediate attention focused on the issue of whether the Office of War Information and military and naval facilities should be used to carry political news to the fighting fronts.

The point was raised by Harrison E. Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in a demand that these news channels be employed to transmit comment on the political implications" of the President's speech to the same extent they were used for the address itself.

The Navy, in response to questions, said a report on the speech was carried over its communications system approximately 24 hours after it was delivered, but but that no report has been carried on Spangler's comments.

The Republican chairman argued that the President, in his speech, had begun a "campaign for a fourth and perhaps continuing term," and termed the address "a bold bid for the vote of our soldiers and sailors who are risking their lives for freedom."

In New York, the office of Robert Sherwood, director of the OWI overseas division, said Spangler's message apparently was sent to him after he left Washington for New York, that he had not seen it, and that he had no comment at this time.

2 D. C. Area Marines Perform Heroically in Solomons Sector

Two Marines from Washington, one a first lieutenant and the other recently promoted to corporal, have been reported as performing outstanding service in the Pacific area by Marine Corps combat correspondents.

First Lieut. Donald L. Herrick, formerly of 2308 Ashmead Place Northwest, has received the Air Medal and Purple Heart for heroism over the Solomons in an "anniversary mission" last December 7.

In describing the action, Lieutenant Herrick said the mission—while blasting a Jap task force—was attacked by both enemy destroyers and Jap Zeros. Although his ammunition box exploded, setting the incendiaries underfoot on fire, and his right leg was battered by a shell, he scored a half hit on one of the Japanese destroyers and brought his plane safely to its home base.

Herrick's parents now live in Miles City, Mont.

Corp. William R. Page, son of Mrs. A. E. Page, 23 Michigan Avenue Northeast, mans a 20-millimeter antiaircraft gun aboard a Marine troop transport. During one of the ship's numerous trips to Guadalcanal and Tulagi, the gunner was credited with shooting down one Jap dive-bomber and assisting in destroying three more.

A graduate of McKinley Tech High School, Corporal Page was employed in the circulation department of The Post prior to his entering the Marines.

Three Youths Admit Murder Of Negro During Detroit Riots

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 30.—Three white youths, two of them teen aged, have confessed to participating in the slaying of a 58-year-old Negro during the Detroit race riots June 21, Prosecutor William E. Dowling announced today.

Dowling said the youths told him a "story of cold-blooded murder" in recounting how the Negro, Moses Kiska, was shot down as he waited for a streetcar at Mack Avenue and Chene Street. Kiska's death was one of 34 police attributed to the rioting and one of 13 which had been listed as unsolved.

Police today also held Leo Tipton, Negro described by Dowling as a "key figure" in the riots. The prosecutor said Tipton seized a public address microphone at a gathering of 500 Negroes late the evening of June 20 and shouted, "Everybody come on; there is a riot at Belle Isle and they have killed a colored lady and her baby." Tipton will be charged with inciting to riot, Dowling said.

Spread of this false rumor through the Negro district, police have said, was largely responsible for swelling the rioting to proportions where it caused the death of 34 persons.

Confessions of Aldo Trani, 16; Armendo Mastantuono, 20, and Anthony Saraceno, 18, solved the slaying of Kiska, Dowling declared. Formal charges were withheld, he said, until questioning of a fourth youth, also held, is completed.

According to the boys' story, Dowling said, the youths decided to "go and get some Niggers." Mastantuono had a rifle, and as they drove along in a car they saw Kiska waiting in a streetcar zone. Trani said, "Give me the gun," Dowling related, and then he leaned out of the car and fired. Kiska fell to the street and the boys drove away and separated.

Ex-Commerce Aide Buys Blue Network

By C. E. Butterfield

Associated Press Radio Editor

New York, July 30.—The Blue Network Co., Inc., first coast-to-coast hookup in the history of radio to be offered to the highest bidder, was purchased for eight million dollars cash late today by Edward J. Noble, owner of a New York local station, from the Radio Corp. of America.

A brief statement from R. C. A. said: "David Sarnoff, president of R. C. A. today announced that an agreement had been reached to sell the Blue Network for the sum of eight million dollars in cash to Edward J. Noble, former Undersecretary of Commerce.

"This move comes a year and a half after the Blue was organized as a separate coast-to-coast network and in conformity with the new regulations of the FCC relating to ownership of more than one network by any single organization. R. C. A. remains owner of National Broadcasting Co. which will continue to operate the Red network."

In an accompanying statement Noble, who is chairman of the Life Saver Corp., said he would dispose of broadcast station WMCA, New York, as soon as a buyer could be found. He added that Mark Woods, president of the Blue since its separation from N. B. C. on January 9, 1942 together with Edgar Kobak, executive vice president, and the present staff would continue as the operating force. He also said there would be no change in policy.

When the Blue started out on its own it comprised 115 stations, but since has grown to 159.

While a part of N. B. C. it became somewhat of a secondary unit of the parent chain. A separate company, it began an aggressive campaign to build up its sponsorship to the point where it soon started to show a profit, at the same time intensifying competition in the network field.

Bidding preliminary to the sale was said to have ranged from six million dollars against a reported original asking price of 15 million dollars.

Brown's Chance To Put Gouge on G. O. P. Flivvers

The destiny of the Republican Party's forthcoming postwar conference, it can now be authoritatively disclosed, rests almost entirely on the whim of one man and a Democrat at that.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, the Democrat in question, merrily revealed in an informal corridor interview yesterday that it is he (ha! ha!) who owns the docks and boats which the Republicans must use to reach their powwow on Mackinac Island, Mich., September 6 and 7.

"And there are no price ceilings on ferry service," the reporter added helpfully, thinking of what a job could be done on the Republican coffers.

"Mmm!" mused Brown as he walked off, rubbing his palms expectantly.

Later, however, it was reported by the New York Herald-Tribune that most of the Republicans, including Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, planned to take a steamer from Buffalo to Mackinac and say "fooey" to Mr. Brown's ferry service.

Wage Increase Denied Shipworker

The War Labor Board yesterday denied a general wage increase to more than one million employes of 188 shipyards throughout the country.

Formally confirming a story in The Post on July 22 that a request for a pay raise would be rejected, the board declared that no general increases could be granted under its wage stabilization policies.

WLB called, however, for a review of the wage rate structure and job classifications in the industry under auspices of either the shipbuilding stabilization committee of the War Production Board (WPB) or the WLB's shipbuilding commission.

Hungary Looks For Concessions

Berne, Switzerland, July 30 (By Telephone From Budapest), (INS).—Broad concessions to liberal elements in Hungary were expected today by the government of Premier Nicholas von Kallay in an obvious reaction to Mussolini's fall.

Democrats, the Peasant Party, and other opposition forces, demanded from Kallay "more freedom," including freedom of the press and popular meetings without police supervision and censorship.

Their entire document was accepted for "friendly consideration."

At the same time the democratic paper, Uiysag, published the text of a speech made by Kallay on May 30 in which he explained the Hungarian independent policy in refusing to send troops to Italy.

Kallay pointed out that it was not under his leadership that the Hungarian government decided to enter the war against Russia, but he significantly admitted that he doubted "that our decision could have been any other than that taken when the call came from the Reich."

Boy Radio Performer Smothers in Cave

San Francisco, July 30 (AP).—Buried in the collapse of a backyard cave, Stephen Floyd George, jr., 13, known to radio audiences for his roles of "Roy Manners" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in the Hawthorne House program series, smothered to death yesterday.

Gen. Arnold's Church Gets Army Award

"Those men went into the battle with us equipped, not with guns, but with God's word."

Private Wooton spoke those words last week, and generals listened.

The occasion was the giving of the first certificate of award to a church which had released its pastor for Army service. The place was the South Post Chapel, Fort Myer, Va., the first-built of 1200 such chapels where more than five million men at Army posts attend service monthly.

Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding general, Army Service Forces, made the presentation to members of the congregation of St. Charles Borromeo Church, Peru, Ind., there to receive it on behalf of Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, Army chief of chaplains, who had served their parish nearly 35 years.

Nine other ceremonies followed in the nine Army command areas last week, and similar ceremonies will be held throughout the Nation in each case in which a chaplain on leave requests the award be made to his former church or organization.

During last Sunday's ceremony, Private Leroy Wooton was asked to supplement the opinion of Army and church dignitaries with the military man's view of the importance of chaplains.

Speaking as a soldier wounded in action—he participated in the initial invasion of North Africa—he said: "We men will never forget how those chaplains were right in the thick of the fight. . . . If our church people at home could only see and realize how much chaplains are doing in the camps, on transports, and on the battle front, I don't think they would hesitate to give their ministers as chaplains."

He told how the chaplains landed with the soldiers in the invasion, although they were not obliged to do so. "When we were wounded, they were right there," he said.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The precise form of God must be of small importance in comparison with the sublime question, What is infinite Mind or divine Love?" (Page 256.)

"STAND UP, STAND UP FOR JESUS"
. . GEORGE DUFFIELD, JR. . . .

Stand up, stand up for Jesus!
Ye soldiers of the Cross;
Lift high His royal banner!
It must not suffer loss;
From vict'ry unto vict'ry
His army shall He lead,
Till ev'ry foe is vanquished
And Christ is Lord indeed.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
The inspiration for this most widely circulated of American hymns was the last message of Dudley Tyng, a young Philadelphia minister, who had suffered much persecution for his courageous persistency in pleading the cause of the oppressed. His last thoughts turned to the splendor of courage and he said, "Tell them to stand up for Jesus."

27 Members of Fifth Baptist Honored at Half-Century Mark

IN REMEMBRANCE—Gathered at the pulpit of Fifth Baptist Church, Mrs. Weston Bruner and Dr. Bruner of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Ida Diamond, 69 years a member, and the Rev. J. Herrick Hall who became last month the fourth pastor since the church's organization, 86 years ago

Twenty-seven persons who have been members of Fifth Baptist Church, 609 E Street Southwest, for 50 years or more were honored last Sunday at eighty-sixth anniversary services, and 17 of that number were present to receive certificates of merit presented by the new pastor, the Rev. J. Herrick Hall.

Two of those who came forward for the award have been affiliated with the church 69 years —Mrs. Ida Diamond and Henry Ashford. Mrs. Margaret M. Willis, also a member 69 years, is a shut-in, as are five others of those not present last Sunday. The pastor and church members visited them during the week to present certificates and flowers from the altar.

Also present Sunday was 93-year-old Archer R. Tiller, oldest of the group assembled, who with Mrs. Tiller has been a member of Fifth for 50 years.

During morning services the sermon was preached by Dr. Weston Bruner, one of Fifth's four pastors during its 86-year history. Both Dr. Bruner and Mrs. Bruner were guests of the church throughout the day's ceremonies. Other pastors of the church have been Dr. C. C. Meador, who was pastor for 47 years, and Dr. John E. Briggs, who succeeded Dr. Bruner 34 years ago and was succeeded by Mr. Hall this year.

During evening services, Mr. Hall reviewed Fifth's history as a testimony to the leadership of God. He recalled from church records that when Fifth was founded in midsummer of 1857, there were only 24 members, and the church property sonsisted of a Bible, a few Sunday School hymnals, a bookcase, some chairs and kerosene lamps. Now there are 750 active resident members, and church property is valued at $125,000.

A birthday cake was lit with 86 candles by the training union during fellowship hour following the evening service.

Others receiving certificates of merit for membership 50 years or more are, in order of their joining: Mrs. R. B. Judd, Mrs. Cora Tracy, Mrs. E. T. Rice, Mrs. Annie M. Bradshaw, Mrs. W. E. Mooney, Mrs. Alberta Dement, Mrs. Emma Martin, Mrs. Fannie Balderson, Mrs. Clara Wright, Mrs. Olive Grigsby, Mrs. T. C. Segar, Mrs. John King, Mrs. Elizabeth Knight, Walter Price, Mrs. Emma Smoot, J. Washington Cathedral Altar Will Be Sunday Sermon Topic

Canon C. W. F. Smith will preach on "The Altar" tomorrow at the 11 a. m. service in Washington Cathedral. This is one of a series of sermons being presented about the local cathedral.

The evensong sermon at 4 p. m. will be preached by the Rev. Spence Dunbar, vicar of St. David's Chapel, within the cathedral close. Holy Communion will be administered during morning services at 7:30, 9:30 and 11.

During evensong at 4 p. m. Pvt. R. Wayne Dirksen will play a recital on the organ.

The cathedral altar, subject of tomorrow's sermon, is officially known as the Jerusalem altar. It was consecrated on Ascension Day in 1902. Stones for the altar came from the temple quarries just outside the Damascus Gate of the City of Jerusalem, where it is said the stones for King Solomon's Temple were fashioned.

The foundation stone supporting the altar was brought from the fields of Bethlehem, and stones from Mount Sinai have been set in the pavement before the high altar.

On the four sides of the altar are inscribed, in New Testament words, the record of the crucifixion, burial, resurrection and ascension of Jesus. Canon Smith will use these inscriptions for his sermon.

NAZARENE NAZARENE

"I WAS A JAPANESE PRISONER OF WAR"
Hear the Thrilling Experiences of Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Osborn, missionaries to China for twenty-seven years. They were in China when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and were interned by the Japanese in occupied China the day war began. Rev. Osborn was in prison for thirty-six days and witnessed considerable Japanese cruelty. However, he, unlike many others, escaped their torture. He will tell about the cruelty of the Japanese and will relate his experience while in their hands. He will tell about the long journey home on the exchange ship, the Gripsholm. Rev. Osborn believes that the Japanese are far more to be feared than the Germans and he will state his reasons.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Luke Sewell, the Browns manager, was very promptly chastised for saying the Yankees were getting the breaks from the American League umpires. He apologized, and has since revised his story. "The umpires," Sewell says, "are showing the strain of working so many doubleheaders."

POVICH

That seems to be another way of saying that the umpiring is pretty horrible. Sewell still gets his point across by apologizing for them. He might as well have said to the umpires, "You're pretty awful, but anybody is liable to break down in this kind of weather. It's quite a strain, but the umpiring is still bad."

If you ask us, the umpiring is worse than that. Within the past week at Griffith Stadium the umpires called two balls fair that were so palpably foul the decisions were ludicrous. Even the home-town fans chuckled at the decision in their favor. Stan Spence was called on a third strike he couldn't have reached with a tent pole.

Sewell said he wasn't impugning the honesty of the umpires, and neither are we, but their competence is something else again. The mystery is where they get the umpires. The hiring is done on the recommendation of Umpire in Chief Tommy Connolly and he certainly has not distinguished himself with the talent he has dug up for the league.

In every World Series, in every All-Star game of the past few years, the National League umpires have usually shown up the American League's, except when such as Bill McGowan and Bill Summers are working. The National League umpires have more dash, more ability and inspire a whole lot more faith.

Old Bill Klem, who is Connolly's opposite number in the National League, apparently does a better job in hiring umpires. His umpires are on top of the plays and move around with more speed and judgment. One of the National League's better umpires is little Jocko Conlon, who used to be in the American League, but he didn't suit Connolly apparently because he wasn't big enough, which was strange inasmuch as Conlon is as big as Connolly.

Certainly there must be better umpires operating in the minor leagues than Connelly has brought up to the American League. They wouldn't have to be terrific, just tolerably good.

In recent years, the American League has gone in for former ballplayers as umpires, without too much success. It's significant that the league's four best umpires—McGowan, Summers, Cal Hubbard and Bill Grieve—are not former ballplayers. One club owner not long ago declared that he'd protest any further appointments of former players of the league as umpires.

Squawking about the umpiring has been a part of the game ever since Abner Doubleday laid out the first diamond years ago, but this season it has been louder than ever before in the American League. And what's so sacred about umpires, anyway? We don't remember of one being fired in midseason.

One of the worst practices of certain of the newer umpires has been to call the plays on the bases before they happen. That's a wonderful feat, if it can be done with accuracy, but Bill Evans, one of the finest umpires who ever lived, declared that he was never able to achieve it. "Somehow, I always had to wait for the ball or the base-runner to get to the bag before the play," Evans once said.

Evans admitted, though, there was a temptation on the part of an umpire to call a play before it happened. "The faster the umpire calls a play, the better," said Evans; "it makes the decision look more authoritative. But on the bases, I always keep my arms folded, so I wouldn't be tempted to call the play too quickly. In that brief second it took me to get my arms untangled, I could think the decision over before I made it."

When Sewell spoke out against the umpiring, he was simply giving voice to what was on every other manager's mind. He took the rap for all of them. The umpires never will be popular, of course, because that's impossible in a job like theirs, but better umpiring would command more respect if not any great love.

Four Jockeys Escape Hurts in Camden Spill

By the Associated Press

Garden State Park, Camden, N. J., July 30.—Four riders escaped injury when four horses went to the ground soon after entering the stretch in the fifth race here today.

With George Perry's Note about two lengths in front and apparently headed for a victory, the 4-year-old gelding crossed his legs nearing the eighth pole and went down. Jockey Carson Kirk scrambled out of danger as first Amperage went over the fallen horse and Woodsaw came up fast to topple. Doctor Graeme was trying to evade the fallen figures when his rider also lost balance and hit the turf.

The ambulance was on the track at once but Kirk, Joe Cavens and Frank Zehr all walked off the track.

Walter Mann, who was astride Amperage, was taken to the first aid room suffering only bruises.

The race, after one-third of the field had been eliminated in this manner, went to Mrs. M. Colford's Davitt, a $12.20 chance. The largest mutuel payoff came in the place hole when Harry Brown's Enchanted finished in the runner-up position with a $153.10 place price. Daring was third.

Cooper Bows To Phils, 3 to 2

St. Louis, July 30.—Mort Cooper trying for his fifteenth pitching victory of the season was flattened by the Philadelphia Phillies tonight, 3 to 2, on an eleventh-inning single by pinch-hitter Jimmy Wasdell which scored Buster Adams. The St. Louis Cardinals took the five-game series, 3 to 2.

Giants' Spree Buries Bucs in 13-7 Barrage

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 30.—The New York Giants went on their biggest scoring spree of the season today as they pounded 12 runs across the plate in the second and third innings and then added another in the ninth to whip the Pittsburgh Pirates, 13 to 7.

The New Yorkers jumped on Bob Klinger, usually a Giant killer, for seven runs in the second, blasted Hank Gornicki for five more in the third and picked up the thirteenth run at the expense of Max Butcher in the last frame. The Giants, however, had to call on Ace Adams to stop the Pirates in the sixth after Harry Feldman had failed as a relief for Cliff Melton, who received credit for the victory.

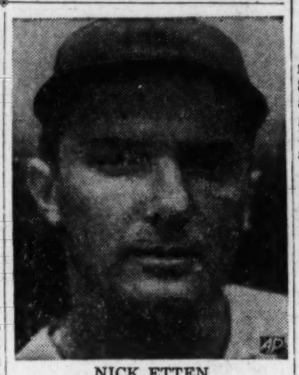
Bonham Gives Up 6 Hits to Win Tenth; Indians' Jeff Heath Clouts 2 Homers

By the Associated Press

New York, July 30.—With Nick Etten driving in three runs and Ernie Bonham hurling six-hit ball for his tenth victory, the New York Yankees made it three out of four for the series with the Cleveland Indians today with a 5-to-4 triumph.

In chalking up their twenty-first success in 31 starts during July, the Yanks got only seven hits off Jim Bagby in seven innings and none off Joe Heving in one but they made the blows count. Etten drove in his three tallies with a long fly, and a double to raise his league leading total runs batted in mark to 66. Bill Johnson, rookie third baseman, knocked in one run to boost his total in that department to 64.



NICK ETTEN

Jeff Heath was the only Indian that caused Bonham any trouble as he blanked the Tribe in all except the fourth and final frames. Heath, returning to duty after an injury, drove out two home runs, both with the bases empty. He hit his first in the fourth and the other in the ninth. The Indians got two other men on after Heath belted his second homer but Bonham forced Buddy Rosar to ground out to end the threat.

Tigers Rally, Gains Split With Bosox

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 30.—The Boston Red Sox came within a putout of sweeping a four-game series today when they divided a double-header with the Detroit Tigers. The Red Sox took the opener, 4-2, and then were overcome by a 5-2 margin when the Tigers staged a four-run rally after two were out in the last inning of the nightcap.

While striving for his twelfth win of the season, Tex Hughson, the Boston ace, was forced to retire during the second inning of first game after being struck on the right thumb by Jimmy Bloodworth's line drive. Tex was relieved by the effective Yank Terry, who was credited with the triumph.

The Red Sox broke a 2-2 tie in the third by scoring twice against Dizzy Trout on singles by Skeeter Newsome and Leon Culberson and Jim Tabor's fly.

Johnny Gorsica started for Detroit in the second game and was trailing, 2-1, when he was relieved by Hank Oana in the seventh. In the ninth, with two out and none on, Oana started the Tigers' surge by singling. Bloodworth then connected safely and the tying run was forced in when Pinky Woods walked Al Unser and Rip Radcliff. Mace Brown then took over the Boston mound and three runners scored when Doc Cramer's long single got away from George Metkovich in center field.

Cincinnati, July 30.—Elmer Riddle for Cincinnati and Charles (Red) Barrett for Boston turned in a pair of three-hit shutout performances today as the Reds and Braves divided a series-closing twin bill, 2-0 and 3-0, in that order.

Elmer Nieman's two-hit homer in the first inning of the nightcap started the tables turning for Casey Stengel's men after Riddle coasted to his fourteenth victory against five defeats in the opener. They added another in the third on a walk, stolen base and Phil Masi's double.

Barrett walked not a man, fanned three and let only two men get as far as second base, Eddie Miller on a sacrifice in the third, and Bert Haas who doubled in the eighth.

Generosity of Eddie Joost, their old teammate, gave the Reds a start toward their win.

Joost committed two bobbles in the second frame, both contributing to the Rhinelanders' initial tally. With one away and Steve Mesner on first with a single, he fumbled Bill Wietelmann's assists on successive grounders by Haas and Ray Mueller, Mesner scoring.

Singles by Dain Clay and Gee Walker, Eric Tipton's attempted sacrifice that turned into a double play and Mesner's single produced the only other tally in the sixth.

Pitcher Also Figures in Nats' Scoring

Lee Hex Thwarted; Chisox Shutout to 8th; Hitless to 5th; Only 3500 There

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats won a ball game last night, honest. They beat the White Sox 4 to 1, as nicely as you please, and just as if they were a very good ball team which had not lost nine of their ten previous starts.

Early Wynn hung it on the White Sox. He saw the Nats home with a five-hit pitching job. Wynn was pitching with a pretty good fast ball and an apparent distrust of his teammates' hitting power, because he drove in their first run, himself, with a single, and he got them their second run after hitting another single.

A lot of people weren't at the ball park last night, again. A crowd estimated at only 3500 saw the Nats turn on the White Sox after three straight defeats. They saw them beat left-handed Thornton Lee, who has had a peculiar hex over the Nats for years.

Spence Benched

The Nats presented a new outfield arrangement which featured the absence of Stan Spence, who was benched for the first time in two seasons with the club. Manager Ossie Bluege, in desperation replaced the weak-hitting Spence with an infielder, Alex Kampouris, who played right field while Gene Moore moved to center and George Case to left.

Kampouris went hitless, but there was no complaint about his outfielding. He made three clever running catches. Case went hitless, too, but the evening was not a total loss for him. The one time he reached base, he promptly stole second to regain a tie for the base-stealing lead with Wally Moses of the White Sox.

Moore Also Delivers

Wynn's own hitting overlapped his pitching honors, but the Nats had another hero in Gene Moore, who delivered a very important single in the fifth that got two runners home. Three times during the night, Moore struck out, but his lone hit was a beaut.

Going into the seventh, the White Sox had only one hit off Wynn, Webb's single to left in the fifth, but by that time Wynn had a 4-0 lead.

Tony Giuliani put the Nats in position to take a 1-0 lead when he led off the third with a looping triple into the rightfield corner. The White Sox squawked that the ball rolled under the rightfield fence or something, but the umpires shook off the protest. Then Wynn belted a single to right to get the run home.

Wynn singled to right all over again with one out in the fifth and the Nats got a break when Cuccinello fumbled Clary's hot grounder. Case forced Clary at second, and then stole second to set the stage for a single to center by Moore that produced two runs.

Kuhel Singles

The White Sox averted a shutout in the eighth, after being held to two hits at that point. Kuhel led off with a single to right and Wynn had two out when Moses hit the rightfield wall for a double to get the run in.

The Sox's fifth hit of the night was Hodgin's single to right with two out in the ninth. The Nats climbed into fourth place and to within a half game of second place by their victory. Gerry Priddy pulled the night's fielding feature, a one-hand grab of Hodgin's drive that was headed toward rightfield in the fifth. This evening, the Browns move in for the start of a six-game series featuring doubleheaders on Sunday and Tuesday. It will be two knucklers on the mound tonight, Dutch Leonard vs. Johnny Niggeling.

Standard Linen Plays

The Standard Linen Service softball champions of 1942 will play a doubleheader with the Briggs Clarifiers tomorrow morning at the Taft-Burrough field, starting at 11 o'clock. Ben Rubin will pitch for the Linens in the Sport Cent League game.

Bithorn Cops 13th as Cubs Paste Dodgers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 30.—The Brooklyn Dodgers muffed a chance to regain second place in the National League today, dropping their third in a row to the Cubs, 12 to 3, while the Giants walloped Pittsburgh.

After getting off to a shaky start, Hiram Bithorn was effective in the pinches to chalk up his fifth in a row and thirteenth victory of the season. Rube Melton started for the Brooks, but failed to retire a man. Johnny Allen, who replaced Melton, was credited with the defeat when Phil Cavarretta and Bill Nicholson connected for successive home runs in the third to break a 2-2 tie.

It was Nicholson's fifteenth round tripper of the year and Allen's first defeat of the season. He had won five.

$50,000 Race to End Arlington Meet

Top Horses Of 'Stripes' 'Cap Liked

Salto, Askmenow Are Also Choice Of Track Wise in Arlington Added

By Charles Bunkley
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, July 30.—The 36-day Arlington Park race meeting, transplanted to its sister track, Washington Park, because of transportation difficulties, comes to an end tomorrow with the running of the $50,000 aided Arlington Handicap at a mile and a quarter.

The race shapes up as a possible duplicate performance of the $50,000 Stars and Stripes Handicap earlier in the meeting when Rounders, Thumbs Up and Marriage finished in that order. All three will start tomorrow. Devil Diver, the losing favorite from the East in the Stars and Stripes, will be missing.

There will be an Eastern invader, however, in Salto, carrying the colors of William Helis of New Orleans. Salto's best race this season was finishing second to Market Wise in the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap July 5.

Rounders, owned by the Valdina Farms, will be ridden by Jockey Ferril Zufelt and will be top weighted with 124 pounds. Thumbs Up, entry of Louis B. Mayer, Hollywood, Calif., motion picture producer, will carry 118 pounds, while Marriage, the entry of Coward and Dupuy, must tote 120. Jockey Otto Grohs will be aboard Thumbs Up, with George Burns riding Marriage.

Thirteen horses were named for the race, which will have a gross value of $61,550, provided all go to the post. In this event the winning owner will collect $43,200.

Besides Rounders, Thumbs Up, Marriage and Salto, nine others figure as starters. They are Sun Again, Aletern, Anti-Climax, King's Abbey, Take Wing, Some Chance, Mar-Kell, Aonbarr and Askmenow. Anti-Climax and Askmenow will run under the colors of Hal Prince Headley of Lexington, Ky.

The presence of the two fillies—Askmenow and Mar-Kell, the latter owned by the Calumet Farms of Chicago—add considerable interest to the race. Mar-Kell, a 4-year-old, and Askmenow, a 3-year-old, generally are regarded as the best of their sex in the country.

Salvage Division Rings In White Sox For Softball Game

Shouts of "ringers" will be resounding through the halls of the War Production Board this morning—and there's a reason.

The Salvage Division and the Conservation Division of the WPB staged a softball game at the Takoma Recreation Center yesterday. Salvage won, 41 to 14. Four players on the winning club were identified as Manager Jimmy Dykes, Coach Bing Miller and Pitchers Grove and Dietrich—all of the Chicago White Sox. Because they had been making scrap of our Nats, Chairman Donald Nelson made them honorary members of Paul Cabot's Salvage Division yesterday.

What the Chisox did to that softball is best described as "murrdurr."

The Salvage Girls downed the Conservation Girls, 18-7, in the powder-puff game.

Nurmi Believes Some Runner Will Do Four-Minute Mile

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, July 30.—Paavo Nurmi, Finland's great runner who still jogs from 4 to 6 kilometers two or three times weekly to keep in condition, is confident some runner—perhaps an American—will run the 4-minute mile.

"When you get a fine field of good competitors setting a fast pace, and track conditions just right, surely someone will run a 4-minute mile," said Nurmi, who hasn't engaged in competition himself since 1933.

Should Alter Training

He predicted that if Americans altered their training methods so long distance runners get workouts over fields and hills they'd become easily as outstanding as Gunder Hagg and Arne Anderson. He added good runners trained for many years and Americans couldn't expect to reach their peak condition during college competition; that they must run until they are 25 or 27 years of age.

Nurmi, now 46, ran in competition until he was 36. He divides his time now between operating a men's shop and helping train boys in Finland's youth legions.

"Everyone should begin training youths now for sports, for they'll be the generation to set our new records since many of the young athletes now are in the war," Nurmi said.

George Best Distance Man

Hagg easily is the best all-around runner of the present day, Nurmi added. He expressed belief, though, that the greatest long-distance runner of all time was Walter G. George, who died recently in England. George ran the mile in 4:12.6, a record which stood for 50 years.

Nurmi would like to see the United States invite Andersson to compete in the winter indoor season, predicting the Swedish school teacher would make an excellent showing.

Petro to Get Shot at Aviles If He Scores

Danny Petro, returning to the ring after several months' absence after his defeat at the hands of Jackie Wilson, was virtually promised a shot at Angel Aviles, promising young Mexican featherweight, who meets Chalky Wright here Monday, August 9, provided Danny gets by tough Johnny Cockfield, whom he meets in a 10-round semi-final on the Wright-Aviles card.

Promoter Joe Turner, who traipsed over to Apollo Gym the other day to watch Danny work out, was impressed by the "Walloping Wop's" speed and apparent return to the form which earned him the bout with Wilson. Turner, who is promoting the Wright-Aviles bout, believes Petro will be a better fighter after having absorbed a licking and much-needed experience from the veteran Wilson. Should Petro whip Cockfield, Turner hopes to make the Petro-Aviles match sometime during August.

Hockey Star Convicted as Draft-Dodger

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 30.—James V. Orlando, Detroit Red Wing hockey player, was convicted by a Federal Court jury late today of violating the Selective Service Act, and was sentenced to four years in prison and fined $2000.

Judge Edward J. Moinet pronounced sentence immediately after the jury of nine women and three men reported it had found the star defenseman guilty on two counts of the indictment against him. Orlando was sentenced to four years on each count, but the sentences will run concurrently.

The jury deliberated for less than three hours.

John R. Watkins, Orlando's attorney, indicated he would appeal the conviction, and Orlando's bond of $2000 was continued pending a hearing Monday.

Teaching the Teacher

Topeka, Kans.—Prof. H. J. Colburn of Washburn College walked into his classroom to teach his first group of Navy men. He found them standing at attention.

He told them good morning. He poked around in his desk a bit. Finally he flushed and said: "All right, gentlemen. How do I get you to sit down?"

Men Are Clumsy

Ottawa, Kans.—A turkey hen on the Roy Busby farm deserted her nest and 17 eggs. The turkey gobbler jumped into the breach. Jumped quite literally, too . . .

In five weeks he'd broken all but two eggs—but he stayed on the nest, even after Busby had removed those two.

"I'm a callow collegian. I started in Government service as a junior clerk. Within a month I was doing Grade 4 statistical work, but I remained Grade 2. After months of this I found my reclassification wouldn't go through because so many others in the office had been there so much longer. They were neither callow nor collegian and they weren't handicapped by having spent four years at a college training themselves to be of more value to their country.

"A year was enough for me. I got tired of being the upstart collegian. Now I'm a callow housewife and a mother. I'm building a happy home for Navy husband and young son. And I believe my husband would classify me on the basis of my ability—no points off for a college education. You see, there's no one in our home who has been here longer to whom my husband would have to show preference.

"A CALLOW HOUSEWIFE."

CALLOW AND COLLEGIANS

I suppose I made a good "callow collegian." With three other young "squirts" only a few years out of college we took grade three clerks' jobs.

"We found ourselves amid a motley collection of former stenographers, our fellow junior clerks, years of Government service, and none with that greatest of all handicaps—a college diploma. We are distinctly unpopular from the start and it was not until we had talked with the personnel manager that we discovered why—the stenographers, our fellow junior clerks, even our supervisors were convinced that we had come to take their jobs away from them.

I may safely say that we were competent. A personnel officer personally apologized to me—they were very sorry, but it just wouldn't do to promote us when others had been there so many years . . . "I admit they can't do the work."

"No, the stenographers and the clerks with their 20 years of hard and bitter struggle need not worry because they did not sacrifice four years of their precious experience to grab a college sheepskin. They'll do all right. They'll get as far as their ability will take them, and probably a few grades further. Pity us poor collegians. Had we spent the years we wasted in college, pounding a typewriter in some Government cubbyhole we'd have doubled our salaries.

"Three of our unhappy quartet have found refuge in the Navy. How our hearts do bleed with sympathy for the poor fourth—he has a physical handicap; the Army won't take him!

"I speak for many of the callow collegians, veterans of the Battle of Washington, who are now in the other fight: these wounded veterans of the Government army, whom we have wronged so fearfully, may now take heart. We'll not come back. Their jobs that we are fighting for are safe. If the torpedoes miss and the ack-ack is mild and the mortar shells go over our heads, we'll come back and dig ditches. Then we'll be happy, too."

OFFICER'S THOUGHTS

"I'm a businessman in an officer's uniform for the duration. I have business that I'm anxious to get back to, the quicker the better. The war can't end too soon for me and I'm doing all I know how on the home front to get it over speedily.

"I've been left a little chilled by personal conversations with some of my fellow duration officers. Like myself, these officers are commissioned from civilian life, but they haven't businesses awaiting them and they are eager to return to their old jobs, some of which don't now exist. These officers are now enjoying rank and prestige and they don't like the prospect of returning to an uncertain and drab civilian life. To them the war has brought its benefits.

"If my future wasn't fixed I'm certain I'd hold a similar feeling. Humans are like that. I worry over how many men in uniform have that hollow and uncertain feeling on the future. The thought of working yourself out of a job isn't the most inspiring thing in the world.

"I don't know what can be done in detail, but I'm convinced that serious consideration must be given at once to the postwar world. And I hope this letter will provoke discussion on an overlooked subject. OFFICER."

Federal Diary of the Air will be heard over WRC tomorrow at 4:35.

Mme. Chiang's New Niece Weighs In at Garfield Hospital

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek has a new niece.

A baby girl, not named as yet, was born at 1 p. m. Thursday at Garfield Hospital to Mme. Chiang's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Liang Soong of 905 Goldsboro Road, Bethesda, Md.

This is the first time in America that a child has been born into the first family of China.

Three brothers and three sisters, all prominent dignitaries, make up the Soong family. Brothers are, besides the baby's father, Dr. T. V. Soong, Foreign Minister of China, now located here; and T. A. Soong, now in California.

Sisters are, the wife of China's generalissimo; Mme. H. H. Kung, wife of the finance minister, now in China, and Mme. Sun Yat-sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic.

5 Men Draw Fines in War Fraud Cases

Two discharged War Production Board officials and three machine tools dealers who admitted conspiring to defraud the Government by interfering with its orderly processes—but insisted it was only after advice of their attorneys—were punished yesterday by fines imposed by Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court.

The five men and their punishments are:

Robert Blee Rhoads, former WPB chief of the Used Tools Section; fined $10,000 for plotting to violate the War Powers Act, and given a 6-to-18-month probation term; fined $5000 for falsifying travel vouchers, and given a 6-to-16-month probation term on this offense to run concurrently with the former term.

Ralph Lamont Glaser, former WPB assistant chief of the Used Tools Section; the same penalties as imposed on Rhoads.

Louis E. Emerman, president of Louis E. Emerman & Co., of Chicago, fined $10,000.

Clarence J. O'Brien and Frank L. O'Brien, jr., of the O'Brien Machinery Co., Philadelphia, both fined $7500.

Rhoads and Glaser pleaded guilty to the charge. The three machine tools dealers pleaded "nollo contendere." All claimed they engaged in the conspiracy only after their attorneys told them their action would be legal.

It was charged that Glaser approached Rhoads on how some critically needed machine tools could be disposed of at a profit. They then met with Emerman, it was charged, in the Willard Hotel and discussed the sale. Emerman sold the tools for $70,000 to the two WPB men. They in turn sold them to the O'Briens for $100,000, with a $15,000 profit to each of them.

In sentencing the men, Justice Laws pointed out that the war effort probably was not impeded by the deal since the machine tools "got into the possession of concerns needing them more promptly than if the deals had been made through other parties."

don have taught us that. It would be unwise judgment to let down our defenses in the light of the good news from Sicily. To do so would weaken us before a still powerful enemy.

"The Civilian Defense army is no toy, no dress parade," he emphasized. "It is built to meet the true danger of death and destruction. The 'CD' is a symbol for our loyalties at home."

The parade itself was a colorful, thrill-inspiring affair. The fourth division, under J. Robert Sherwood, director of CD for Prince Georges County, gave new zest and pep to the weary and footsore spectators when, at 9:15 p. m., three hours after the parade started, it swung past the reviewing stand led by the Maryland Guard and followed by fire apparatus sounding sirens as drivers swung their searchlights from one side of the street to the other.

Monuments of Past

As if to silently describe the war aims of the United States, the monument at Seventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue looked down on the present-minded thousands from its lofty perch where "Faith, Hope, Charity and Temperance" stood out in bold relief.

And as the marchers bowed to the cheers further along, at Thirteenth Street, there hove into view shades of Brandywine and Valley Forge on the monument honoring General Pulaski, American friend of another day.

The District motorcycle police drew prolonged applause when they rode by in V formation and the Army Air Force Band, first in line, set the tempo which was to continue for three long hours. The WAACS, WAVES, Women Marines, all came in for their share of applause in this, their first public appearance here as units.

Salute to Police Band

Anti-aircraft guns, mounted on tanks and half-tracks; soldiers taking their orders by radio, the Navy Band, which played especially well as it passed the reviewing stand and the District Police Band. One of their former leaders, Lieut. Charles Benter, leader of the newly formed Police Band, was a Navy musician for years.

The Coast Guard, fire services and naval ambulance units concluded the first division.

The second, under William J. Mileham, Chief Air Raid Warden, consisted of all the civilian defense units and about 600 paraded under his leadership.

The Gas Company Band vied with two snappy drum-majorettes for attention. The high-stepping girls were equal to the lively music and proved a feature along the line of march. Many Red Cross ambulances, canteens and workers were in line.

There were 30 floats. The Brightwood and Columbia Heights areas furnished two as did the Michigan Park section. The Mid-City section presented a float resembling a tropical beach, with trees in full bloom and the U. S. Engineering Department and the District Health Department each had one portraying the essential medical work available in time of actual raids. The floats carried 1700 riders.

Fifteen bands were in the parade, 3972 persons in full uniform and 332 automobiles and other vehicles. And there were 37 horses in the line of march.

The grand marshal was Brig. Gen. C. W. Kutz, Engineer Commissioner for the District. Gen. John T. Lewis was the reviewing officer and in command of the military. Under him was Col. Walter C. Roberts in charge of the mixed military marchers. The parade committee was composed of Granville Gude, chairman, Edgar Morris and Clarence Arata.

Ribbon Recipients

Those who were presented with Defense Ribbons following the parade were: Warden Service, 3000 hours, Martha M. Nash, Alfred A. Nash, Thomas W. Sandoz, S. C. Tupman, Rowland Speer, William O'Connell, Joseph B. Levy, John R. O'Sullivan, James A. Brooks, Bertha Stroberg and Hartman Keefer.

Auxiliary Rescue Squad, 3000 hours, Alice N. Rollins; Emergency Food and Housing, Thelma Morgan; Volunteer Office, Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr., Mrs. J. H. Kaufman and Mrs. Charles Daly, jr.

Auxiliary Police, Eneas F. McCarthy, Frank M. Dyer, Robert G. McGuire, Charles Henderson and Norman J. Moll.

Those who served 4000 hours and their assignments: Warden Service, W. J. Mileham, Heywood Saunders, Frances W. Lucas, Paul M. Yohe; Auxiliary Rescue Squad, George L. Strong, Daniel C. Long, Walter C. Lockwood and Harriet Q. Long; Evacuation Authority, Joseph Sanders; Emergency Transportation J. A. Brown and Gertrude Sternhagen.

Two have given more than 5000 hours voluntary service. They are Elmer Johnson, Deputy Air Raid Warden of the Brightwood Area, and George E. Cox, assistant air raid warden of the Dupont Circle area.

Trapp Singers Appear Tonight In The Post's Starlight Concert

Baroness Maria Augusta von Trapp, sturdy Austrian noblewoman who left her hayfields, of Vermont to give two Post Starlight concerts in Washington with her seven singing daughters, said yesterday that her refugee family believes deliverance of their native Austria soon will follow the collapse of Italy.

The Trapp family singers will appear tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 at Meridian Hill Park under the direction of Father Franz Wasner, their priest and concert conductor.

Her blue eyes alight with enthusiasm as she spoke of the promising situation in Italy, Baroness von Trapp said the European crisis has a particular significance to her family because their 300-year-old Austrian castle is nestled in the Alps not far from the Italian border.

In Peasant Costume

The bronzed woman, who now delights in tilling the acres of her Stowe, Vt., farm in contrast with her leisurely life of the old country, was dressed in a vivid Austrian peasant costume which she made herself. Her forcefulness, her fluency in the English language, her direct approach to problems facing the singers made it apparent that she had led the refugees from destitution in a strange land to a successful concert career.

Describing their plight when they arrived in America four years ago, she reminisced at the Raleigh Hotel: "My husband, nine children, our priest and I landed in this country with $4 for all of us and a contract for stage appearances. We spoke no English. We had no friends. We were refugees in the true sense of the word. Hitler's troops had occupied our castle and we were seeking freedom in this wonderful land.'

Describes Farm Life

While her seven shy daughters, all of them with hair braided coronet fashion, listened quietly and her husband, Baron George von Trapp, occasionally spoke in broken English, the baroness described life on their Vermont farm, in which every member of the family has definite tasks. One of the young baronesses is a shoemaker and repairs all the Trapp shoes. Another is a silversmith. All the girls till the fields and work as carpenters on the old farm house, which they are renovating.

"My two oldest boys—Rupert and Werner—are in the American Army," the baroness said. "We are all in the process of becoming citizens of the United States. We hope to return some day for a visit to Austria. But this is our country and we hope to remain here the rest of our lives."

Exalted Senate Cat, 4 Babies Seek New Home

Victor Lenzi, Senate Restaurant chef, was a sad man yesterday. Even the promise of a brand-new cook stove and a renovated kitchen failed to console him.

"What," he moaned, "is a new stove when my Victoria and her four babies are about to be turned out of their home? When we close this restaurant tomorrow poor Victoria will be homeless."

The mother of four was taking the situation with the same philosophy she displayed when she began to be called Victoria instead of Hitler, upon the amazing discovery of her distinctively feminine achievement of giving birth to babies.

Victoria is the Senate Restaurant cat. She has worked hard and faithfully to keep the kitchen free from rats and mice. No ordinary cat is she. Victoria has brushed against the most distinguished legislators from time to time.

The restaurant closed after today for the summer, so that extensive renovations can be made, and Victoria's friends are trying to find a home for her and the babies.

It's embarassing to Victoria's friends that they named her Hitler, and those in the know attribute the faux pas to factious bus boys. They thought she was a he and her little black and white face reminded them obscurely of Hitler's facial toothbrush.

Assurance is given she never had anything, even sex, in common with the paperhanger of Berlin.

E. W. Darling, manager of the Senate Restaurant, said yesterday anyone willing to take a well-educated cat who has a Senate diploma as a mouser, may telephone him at NA-3120, Extension 149. Victoria's kittens, he said, are very promising even though the whereabouts of the father is unknown.

Call today, Darling warns, because the restaurant closes and he's going to be busy renovating the main Capitol kitchen and installing new equipment and a cafeteria in the Senate office building.

Beer Shortage Attributed to Lack of Malt

A record thirst and a lack of sufficient quantity of malt was given yesterday by the War Food Administration, the OPA, the ODT and the brewing industry as the reason for the current shortage of beer, the OWI said.

Brewers are doing their bit to cool the parched throats of the Nation and producing more beer than ever before in their history. They are able to extend themselves even further but for the supply of malt, an OWI statement said.

Malt production amounts to 97 million bushels a year and the brewers use 65 million all that can be allotted to them. The remainder is used for export, industrial alcohol and food products, the statement continued.

Brewers have been padding out their allotments with rice and corn but this has gone as far as it is possible now.

And, Government agencies said, there would be no relief until the usual summer demand abated.

Tipplers who prefer their alcohol in stronger doses also are in for a bit of grief, according to the reports which show whisky stocks to be at the lowest ebb in seven years. The stocks dropped nearly 100 million gallons during the fiscal year ended June 30, the Treasury Department said.

52 Rooming Houses Denied Renewal Of Licenses Here

The District Commissioners yesterday refused to renew 52 rooming house licenses and warned police action will result if operation is continued.

Reason for the refusal to relicense was announced as being due to failure of the operators to meet morality or fire safety regulations.

Names of the rejected establishments were forwarded to police for check to determine if the establishments continued to operate in violation of the law.

The action was taken following a report by Edward E. Bailey, jr., superintendent of licenses. He said "because of adverse recommendations already made in the reports to him" he thought it best to call the attention of the Commissioners to the situation before they took final action and granted renewals.

Compulsory Cadet Corps Law Studied

Stymied by the corporation counsel's interpretation that cadet training may not be compelled here, the Board of Education may seek legislation to amend the restrictive rulings of 1907, it was indicated yesterday. The move is contemplated to enable schools to provide compulsory cadet training.

The student activities committee of the board agreed to take further action on the proposal of compulsory training when the board reconvenes in the fall.

To Stress Advantages

Meanwhile, the committee voted the Cadet Corps organization should continue to function on the noncompulsory basis of past years, with the provision officers and teachers should publicize the advantages of corps training.

Although Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of high schools, had suggested the board "seek legislation promptly upon the convening of Congress," Dr. James A. Gannon, board member, proposed that reactions of parents and youths affected, should first be sounded out.

Implying the term "compulsory" training might be objectionable, Maj. Charles Fearing commented, "I think much can be done to stimulate interest in the Cadet Corps by appealing to the boys to enter the corps and to the parents not to ask for excuses, unless on religious or physical grounds."

New Law Planned

The board had questioned the right of parents to reqquest their sons be excused from training without such grounds.

Commissioner Guy Mason recently stated while the District Commissioners would not ask Congress to enact the type of legislation sought by the board, they would forward legislation prepared by the board to Congress.

To make the training available to more boys, especially those employed in after-school jobs, the committee voted that drill hours be permitted in the morning, 8 to 9:30 a. m. The early hours, which Calvin Coolidge instituted three years ago, would be optional, depending on the demand in the various high schools.

Enrollees in the program will continue to wear the navy-blue uniform of past years, as the committee agreed not to adopt the khaki recently recommended.

Driver Fined 37 Coupons By OPA Panel

Doubtful honors were showered on two violators of the pleasure driving ban in the District of Columbia last night when penalties assessed James P. Keating, 4819 Reservoir Road Northwest, and Carl W. Stamates, 1205 Thirtieth Street Southeast, proved the sternest yet meted out by the special OPA panel board.

Keating, a salesman for the Union Beauty & Barber Supply Co., is minus 29 B gasoline coupons and 8 A coupons.

Stamates, who did not appear before the board, was fined the remainder of A gas coupons in his possession and the rest of his B coupons plus all right for gasoline rationing for a perior of three months—provided his revoked coupons and books are turned in to the OPA within one week after notification.

Otherwise he will forfeit his rationing right for four months.

Stamates tossed his notice to appear in court in the street and refused to let the OPA investigator see his coupon book when halted on May 21, it was charged.

"It is his second violation of the nonessential driving ban," John Laskey, OPA attorney, explained.

Keating's penalty mainly was for possession of unsatisfactorily explained unattached T. R. and B coupons, according to Acting Chairman John Conlin, jr.

Twenty-three cases were acted upon during the session, held at the Force School building, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, three of them being continued until next week.

In addition to Keating and Stamates, five others were penalized. They were: George and M. M. Scott, 3110 Central Avenue Northeast, four A coupons; John S. Jones, 103 Second Street Northeast, one A coupon; Antonio R. Scafone, 230 Upshur Street Northwest, one A coupon; John Smith, 472 Ridge Street Northwest, two A coupons, and Francis J. Linkins, Takoma Park, Md., two A coupons.

Navy Reports District Youth Hurt in Action

John Edward Sabin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Charles Sabin, jr. of 1830 Massachusetts Avenue Southeast, has been wounded in action, the Navy Department reported yesterday.

SABIN

Sabin, who recently transferred to the Navy Commando Corps and had been overseas since March, was among 35 casualties listed by the Navy including 12 dead, 14 wounded and 9 missing. In addition, the status of one casualty was changed from prisoner of war to dead.

A Washington native, Sabin was born, December 16, 1923. He attended Holy Comforter and St. John's High School before working for the War Department. Sabin joined the Navy last October and had radio training at Great Lakes before transferring to the commando course. The notice that he was wounded reached his family on July 15, and a few days later a letter from the youth, written July 7, arrived.

On Handbags

If you're the proud owner of a good leather handbag, it's a pleasure to "make-it-do" for the duration. Here's how:

Repair It—

Maybe all your handbag needs is a new lining, a broken catch repaired, new hinges, or some other kind of repair work to make it usable again. Whatever first aid is necessary we've found the place that will do it for you, at a small fraction of the cost of your irreplaceable handbag and in record time these manpower-shortage days.

Clean It—

It's also possible to have your handbags, whether leather or fabric, cleaned and tinted. Well worthwhile for the fine bags that have seen many years of service but are still worth their weight (contents included) in leather.

Counterattack Depreciation

And here are two shopping finds as important to your leather goods as starch is to cotton. They're tried and true.

The first one is a cleaner for leather goods and it comes in either liquid or paste form. Especially good for fine soft leathers, and you can also use it on white handbags or white shoes. It won't rub off! 25 cents.

The second item is particularly fine for the refinishing and softening of leather. It adds oil to the leather—just enough to make it partially waterproof so that there will be sufficient ventilation through the pores. 25 cents.

Take a Hint—

Overstuffing your handbag spoils the shape, weakens the fastenings and may break seams. Are you guilty?

Zippers work better when they're treated gently. Remember they're irreplaceable.

Keep cosmetics in a special case. For a bit of change you can get a real rubber bag to hold all of them.

Alternate handbags to give them a rest. Stuff crumpled tissue paper inside to help it retain its shape.

If you've a silver or gold evening bag, wrap it in black tissue paper to prevent tarnish.

Don't rub leather too hard as you may remove the finish.

Wax each new handbag before using to protect the leather from the oil in the hands. You can get gobs of saddle soap for a quarter.

A light coating of clear nail polish will protect any metal trimming from tarnish.

Napkins From Tablecloths

"I've been making table napkins for everyday use out of old tablecloths, which are out of date now, as I always use table mats on my table. I can make nine good-sized napkins out of a 54-inch cloth. I've even hemstitched some, but as a rule I just sew a hem on four sides, by hand, and the children like these colored napkins." E. D. B.

MAKE IT DO . . .

How to Make Floors Last and Look Good

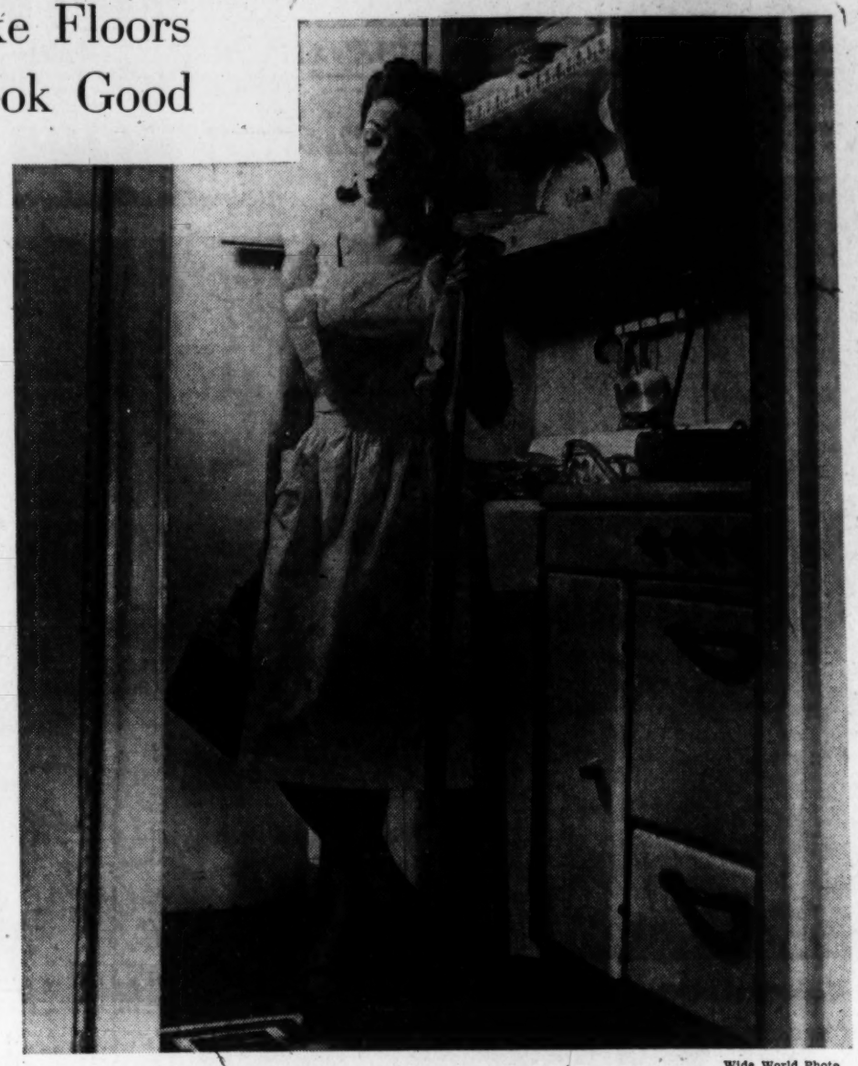
By Martha Ellyn

If the lack of manpower is cutting in on the upkeep of your home, don't let it distress you too much. If you own your home you may not be able to get a painter or carpenter to help you lift the house's face. Or if you live in an apartment and the manager says it isn't possible to redecorate the walls or give new sheen to your floors, don't wail too loud and long. Try a hand at the face-lifting yourself.

It won't be too dreary a job if you have a plan. Of course, you don't want to try to accomplish the rejuvenating of all the floors or the walls in one day—nor in two or three. Do the job by rooms. Get up and at it in the cool of the morning. Eat a sturdy, nourishing breakfast, because this work is not like going to a pink tea. Know the finish of your floors and walls and give them treatment accordingly.

Well-cared-for floors are the pride of all "good" housekeepers. Our grandmothers and great - grandmothers scrubbed their unfinished wood floors to a gleaming whiteness. In the early days there was just one type of floor and one method of cleaning—sand and strong soap, water and "elbow grease." But today the floors in homes are of many types and finishes.

Beautiful floors need protection against wear, scratching and marring. But to give them adequate care we must know whether the finish is varnish, oil, paint, shellac, stain or wax, in order to give the proper care. Let's consider wood floors and their care. Although there are other types of floors—linoleum-covered, clay tile, slate, marble, terrazo and cement—yet the average home has wood floors.



Wide World Photo

Many a young homemaker dubiously eyes the condition of her floors. But any suspicions she may have that they can't be kept gleaming will be dispelled when she gives the proper care. Comfortably dressed in a cool pinafore with her long hair tied up, she will be able to whistle while she works because she has taken the pains to know the proper treatment for her particular kind of floors

Know the Finish

The care and proper maintenance of a wood floor depends entirely upon the finish that has been applied. If you know the type of finish used on your floors, and understand the advantages and disadvantages, you will be able to give them care which will insure longer life and better appearance.

The most commonly used finishes are wax, shellac, varnish, gloss lacquers, penetrating finishes or reals, floor oil and paint. The following tells how each type should be cared for to give it the beset chance to survive.

Wax—The beauty of the grain in the wood is brought out by wax. Wax may be applied to a floor which has been stained, painted, treated with a penetrating finish, varnished, shellacked or lacquered. But before applying wax to a floor which has been oiled, be sure to scrub the floor to remove as much of the oil as possible. If this procedure is followed, wax can be used successfully.

There are several types of wax. Paste wax gives a mirror-like finish when properly used. It should be applied in a thin film with a lamb's wool applicator or cheese-cloth pad. Too much wax smears and makes the floor slippery. Let it dry at least half an hour. The surface then must be polished until hard and lustrous with an electric floor polisher, if possible. Polishing by hand is tedious, but can be done with a weighted polisher. Oftentimes a floor polisher can be rented. Home-made ones can be contrived. I have seen them made by using a box slightly larger than a cigar box, with handle attached and weighted with a huge rock and padding on the bottom of the box.

The luster will be increased if a second thin coat of wax is applied. Let each coat dry for half an hour and then polish to a hard surface before applying the next coat.

Liquid Wax—This type is really paste wax with more solvent added. It is easier to apply than paste wax and the finish is the same as that produced by paste wax. It should be applied evenly in a thin coating with a lamb's wool applicator or a cheesecloth pad. Let it dry for half hour. Polish in same way as for paste wax, using one or more coats as desired.

Self-Polishing Wax—This type has a water base. It is extremely easy to use and dries to a good shiny finish without polishing. The wax film is thinner and not as hard as the film provided by paste or liquid wax, therefore it must be renewed more often. This wax is especially adapted to use on linoleum, kitchen floors and work surfaces. But it should be used on wood floors only if the floor has been sealed with a waterproof finish such as a good varnish, shellac or paint, because otherwise the water base may raise the grain of the wood. This is the only type of wax which can be used on rubber tile, sheet rubber or asphalt tile, because both paste and liquid waxes contain a solvent which is injurious to these floor coverings. It should be applied in a thin film with an applicator or cheesecloth pad in long even strokes and then allowed to dry 20 to 30 minutes.

Care After Waxing

After floors are waxed they then need further care—either daily, weekly, monthly or twice yearly. An untreated dust mop should be used daily. But never use an oiled mop on waxed surfaces, for it softens the wax and leaves an unabsorbed film of grease to catch dust. Once a week, for floors finished with paste or liquid wax, dust should be removed from floors either by the vacuum cleaner or soft hair broom. If necessary, go over them with untreated mop. When treated with self-polishing wax, use a damp mop if necessary. About once a month floors which have been treated with either paste or liquid wax should be polished with weighted brush or electric floor polisher. Rewax the spots which receive heavy wear, if necessary. Liquid wax is best for this patching. On a soiled floor which has been finished with self-polishing wax, wash with mop wrung out of warm mild soapsuds. Rinse with mop wrung from clear, warm water. When dry, apply fresh coat of wax if necessary. To prevent an excess accumulation of wax, scrub very thoroughly between every two or three applications of self-polishing wax.

When doing spring or fall housecleaning, use a paste or liquid wax and wax entire floor. In this way you will be able to have floors of lasting beauty.

Remember to wipe up immediately any water or other liquid spilled on floors waxed with paste or liquid wax, or white spots will appear which will require rewaxing. Any soil spots can be removed with a cloth lightly dampened with turpentine or liquid wax. Rub on the spot until soil is removed. Allow to dry and then apply a new coat of wax; let it dry and then polish. Scratches may also be treated with this procedure. Light scratches may disappear with polishing alone.

Of course, if you have floors treated with shellac (the popular finish of painters and landlords because it dries rapidly and the floor is not out of service more than 24 hours, then you have a different problem. Varnished floors also require special treatment, as do the ones finished with gloss lacquers, paint, floor oil or penetrating finishes or seals.

Veils for Victory

(News Item—Looms that used to make veils for women's hats are now turning out mosquito netting for the Navy.)

Patriotically we face the world
unsheathed and unflattered,
Heroically we reveal our countenances worn and battered,
So our brave boys may be protected from the mosquito;
So Tojo may speedily meet with the same fate as Benito.

Millinery Melting Pot

"I'd like to see something in fall hats . . . something rather tailored, and in size—"

"Just a minute! What influence do you want?"

"Beg pardon?"

"Do you want something Chinese, Russian, Balkan, British, North African—or possibly Italian?"

"Oh—I don't know. I want something becoming to my face."

"The Balkan influence is very new. Let's try this Chetnik turban . . ."

"Heavens no! That makes me look like a battle ax."

"But the Chetnik influence—"

"I want a hat that does something for my face."

* * * *

"How do you feel about Russia?"

"Beg pardon?"

"Would you prefer a Russian diadem or a Russian Da-Da bonnet?"

"We-ll I hardly think either would be suitable for my face. You see what I want—"

"The Russian influence is very strong in millinery this season."

"But I just want a simple hat—"

"How about this Casablanca turban? It's very good right now."

"No that isn't my type. You see my face needs a different line."

"All right. Let's try this little Chinese coolie model."

"No that won't do either. You see I haven't an Oriental cast of face."

"Then let's try this mandarin beret . . . Now this is more aristocratic."

"Still it's not my hat. You see my face . . ."

* * * *

"Well we haven't tried anything British yet. Now here's a little poke bonnet."

"No that isn't suitable at all to my face."

"But the Victorian influence is still very good. You aren't by any chance an Anglophobe?"

"No! It's just that I want the right type of hat for my face."

"How do you feel about General de Gaulle?"

"Well-er I really hadn't thought."

"I have a very smart little Fighting French cap."

"I couldn't wear a cap."

"How about a Dutch bonnet? Now the Dutch influence—"

"Just a minute! Haven't you anything American? You see after all my face—"

"Not at present. But I tell you what! You come back tomorrow. We'll have some new Sicilian peasant hats in."

Mrs. Roosevelt believes the shape of the hats may be keeping some women from enlisting in the WAACS, WAVES, SPARS, etc. This will no doubt draw masculine guffaws directed both at Mrs. Roosevelt and at women generally. And when you consider the hats the sailors have had to put up with, it does seem as if men had succeeded in subordinating vanity to patriotism. And yet—how many men even in wartime would want a world of women who had risen above caring what their hats did to them?

Just as most newspaper and magazine readers were drawing signs of relief over the cessation of photographs of women welders, there comes the news that the new millinery styles include a welder's helmet in felt.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

Except for skyrocketing prices—increased living costs—and the mushrooming of a few day nurseries in cotton mills and other industrial plants, the war has brought no marked changes in Brazilian life. So revealed Maria da Penha Kiehl, chief of the technical division, Department of Social Services, Sao Paulo, Brazil.

REYNOLDS

The chic senhorita arrived in Washington Sunday to be a guest of the State Department. While waiting for her program to be mapped out by the Women's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, she held a press conference yesterday. She leaves this week for Chicago to take a three week course in War Social Services at the University of Chicago. After visiting various social agencies in the Midwest and New York, she will tour war plants. Maryland also is on her itinerary.

Referring to the child care centers near industrial plants, Senhorita Kiehl said that many more are needed. Laughingly, she explained that working mothers who placed their children in day nurseries are much more efficient housekeepers than nonworking mothers. Also, family relations seemed happier as a result of education received at the day nursery centers. This conclusion is based on a survey of social workers.

Schools in Sao Paulo are overcrowded. The children go in three-hour shifts. There are too many to be placed in the inadequate nursery centers. As a result Sao Paulo has developed a unique system of children's parks. Not only is their play supervised, but health. Showers and modern playground equipment make the parks a safe and popular resort. There are 10 or 12 of such parks, according to Senhorita Kiehl.

Terming Sao Paulo a perpetual boom town, she said that it had been estimated that 2½ houses are built there every hour—it's the center of the fruit and cotton industry. Still the rapid program does not provide enough housing for the people. However, the alert senhorita, who chucked a purely social whirl for the more serious business of social welfare, does not blame the war for jammed conditions of housing and schools—it was so before and probably will continue to be, at least as long as its rapid expansion continues. And that is comparable to many of the industrial cities that have boomed with the war.

One of the first professional social workers in Brazil Senhorita Kiehl is the only permanent one—the others are political appointees. A professor of music (piano) she became interested in social work while studying at a convent in Brazil. After completing her work in dramatics and music, she spent two years studying at the Ecole Catholique de Service Social in Brussels, Belgium. Upon returning to her native land, she organized a school for social workers—already 70 have graduated, including both men and women.

Discussing the Brazilian women's war work, she said that they are especially active in Red Cross and civilian defense work. The civilian defense uniforms are adopted from those of the army. The coat is similar, buttons and all—but the skirts are a cross between pants and skirts—in short, culottes.

Permanent blackouts along the coast, occasional blackouts in other parts of the country, give a realistic touch to an uninvaded nation at war.

In the near future, Senhorita Kiehl thinks that Brazilian troops will join our armed forces in the overseas fight . . . that is as soon as they are fully trained.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There are few influences upon a child's own appetite so profound as the likes and dislikes toward food displayed by the parents.

The attitudes of a parent may be of frank dislike for some food, or they may be such substleties as a curled lip or an indifferent shrug when mealtimes or foods are mentioned. In either case, the child takes his cue from the parents. One mother who admitted she had never cared for food had a child who was a persistent feeding problem. It could hardly be otherwise.

Unless a parent is made ill by the eating of some food, she should consider it her obligation to express an interest in it. Some small portion of every food, regardless of whether it is well-liked, should be accepted and eaten and no comment made unless it could be a flattering one.

The influences of these attitudes communicate themselves to the children. Mealtimes become enjoyable interludes in the day, what one has for dinner becomes exciting, not just food to be eaten and the whole ceremony somewhat of a bore.

Men, so it has always seemed to me, suffer most from the pampering they have received from their mothers, and display the strongest food dislikes, or become the most ardent gourmets.

Women who are imaginative cooks enjoy food and make no bones of it. But the great majority of women, fearful of their figures, get little pleasure out of food and work to curb rather than encourage their appetites.

In such cases the children, seeing the indifferent eye of the mother cast at the array of food, or hearing the caustic comment from father about "that custard stuff not being fit to eat," follow the same pattern.

It's a pattern easy to adopt, since food dislikes themselves may become distinguishing marks of personality. The persons who can't or won't eat this or that make up an army.

Since the choice of food is limited today by price, availability and food stamps, it behooves all of us to adopt more appreciative attitudes toward the food we can have. It's true we may all be eating foods toward which we are relatively indifferent. It won't do us any harm to stop pampering ourselves. We are, despite food restructions, still the best-fed Nation in the world and we should imbue our children with that idea.

We can enjoy food. We can appreciate it. Being well fed is not a fad; it is a full-time job of parents to know food values and then, when those foods which represent them are served at the family table, to take an interest in them and eat them with relish and enjoyment. The influence on the appetites of the children will be incalculable.

Our leaflet, "Foods for Young Children," offers recipes for the usual foods found in the diets of children. It may be had by sending a 3-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newapsper.

Hang Draperies New Way

A new and smart way to hang your draperies is to run the pole through big well-bound eyelets, or over-scale buttonholes, instead of through rings or a hem. Consider, too, the idea of covering a pole with flowered chintz to use for hanging sheer organdy or net curtains.

Wider Maternity Dresses

The War Production Board (WPB) has authorized an increase of six inches in the width of maternity dresses. Wrap-around styles may measure 94 inches in sweep, while others are limited to 86 inches.

Relief for Tired Dresses

By Ruth Gregory

Have you got the "need-something-new" urge?

It hits most females this time of year—again in February and March. It's a natural kind of thing. The new clothes you bought at the start of the season—any season—begin to lose their "oomph.". It's too early to wear the new season's offerings, and you hesitate about investing in new summer clothes.

Here are a few ideas that may help you to get rid of that dismal morning feeling, that pulled-down mouth as you survey your closet stock. None of them call for much tinkering (except the scarf, and if you're handy with the needles, that's no problem.)

That coat dress which you bought because it was so easy to wear, so easy to change collar and cuff sets, may be asking for a new treatment. How about running a wide eyelet ruffle around the neck and right down to the waist? That'll perk it up.

You can take that same length of ruffling and try it a new way on another dress. For instance, how about looping it down from the shoulders and across the bosom. Gives a nice effect with a V-neck line as sketched. Try the same idea on other necklines.

A long scarf, knit out of soft and colorful yarn, can be a very versatile item in your wardrobe. It can add drama to a sweater and skirt combination, or to a simple, untrimmed dress. Drape it around your neck, around your middle, or cross it in front over your bosom and tie it behind.

Another good idea for lending zip to one of your tired summer cottons is to get about three yards of lace or ruffling and tack it around in a little apron effect as sketched. You could do the same with a length of bright-colored rick-rack. Or make a double border of rick-rack above the hemline.

If you have a little print that's seen too many tubbings to look good enough for office wear, why not change it into a sunback dress. Slit it down the back, hem the edges and turn them back as sketched.

A few ideas like this should maybe hold that urge in check till the air starts getting snappy (that can't be too soon for us.)

A Latin Sees Stars—The Hollywood Variety

Col. Alban-Borjà, Military Attache of The Ecuadorean Embassy, Meets Ann Sheridan

By Marie McNair

Ann Sheridan stopped work in the middle of a movie scene to be photographed with him; Ida Lupino took him to luncheon on the set and Humphrey Bogart took him aside and told him some American jokes. And Col. Agustin Alban-Borja, Military Air Attache of the Ecuadorean Embassy says of his recent Hollwood visit: "Ah, Hollywood is wonderful . . . and the North American girl is the most beautiful girl in the world."

Colonel Alban's visit to the movie capital was not inspired by the thought of meeting Hollywood movie queens. It was a business trip which gave him his first glimpse of California, the land of fruits and flowers, and the little excursion to Hollywood was on the side, with introductions arranged for by the Inter-American Defense Board.

"Everybody was so courteous and kind," said the Ecuadorean officer, "from the directors on down, at the Twentieth-Century Fox and Warner Brothers, the only two studios that I visited. When I came on the set where Ann Sheridan was working she thought I was another actor until I explained that my uniform was of the Ecuadorean army and that I was but a visitor. Then she graciously posed for a picture with me."

Learned Technicalities Of Film Making

Colonel Alban learned much of the technical angle of movie producing from his tour of the studios that day. He was particularly interested in seeing "Mission to Moscow" being done in Spanish for distribution in South America. He heard about the forthcoming picture "Song of Bernadette" said to be "great."

Chatting with Miss Sheridan on the subject of the movies she told him with a great seriousness that she believes that the film people are fulfilling their part in the war effort with as much integrity as the soldier fighting in the field.

Being an officer of the Ecuadorean cavalry, and holding the champion high-jumping record, Colonel Alban and Ida Lupino found a subject of mutual interest for table talk at luncheon. Miss Lupino adores horses, she told her luncheon partner; rides all day Saturday and Sunday when she's not working on a picture. Very intelligent, lovely to look at—as pretty without make-up as she is with it—Colonel Alban found the actress a most engaging person. She talks well, and took great pains to answer clearly and concisely the visitor's questions about details of her work.

Found Everyone Working for Victory

In Los Angeles Colonel Alban, eager to gather impressions from the "man in the street" on his thoughts about the war, found everyone convinced of victory and working hard toward that end. He was particularly interested in the recreation centers, clubs and organizations founded for the servicemen, and was especially impressed with the Officers Club in the Biltmore Hotel, where he attended a dance with several other Ecuadorean officers who are in California for special training.

No—This Is Not a Mistake . . .

. . . for this picture does not belong in the theater section. For once, Ann Sheridan, glamorous film star, is less important to a caption writer than the person posing with her. He is Col. Agustin Alban-Borja, Ecuadorean Air and Military Attache, who recently visited Hollywood; met a complete constellation of screen luminaries; visited some of them "on the set" and had his picture made with at least one—as the shot above proves conclusively

Foundry Methodist Church Scene of Dalby-Boyd Nuptials

Bridegroom Member of Naval Reserve Is Son of Army Officer of Long Island

Foundry Methodist Church was the setting for the wedding last evening of Miss Marlea Jane Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford C. Boyd, and Kenneth Bates Dalby, U. S. N. R., son of Maj. and Mrs. Mark F. Dalby of Long Island. The ceremony at 8 o'clock was performed by Dr. John W. Rustin.

White gladioli and candles were used on the altar and palms and candelabra throughout the church. Glenn Carow, organist, played the wedding music and the vocal soloist was Mrs. A. M. Hanke.

Mr. Boyd gave his daughter in marriage. The bride's gown was of white marquisette appliqued in a lace floral spray and made with a sweetheart neckline, long, full sleeves and tight bodice. The full skirt ended in a train. She wor a flinger-tip-length veil of illusion with lace and orange blossoms forming a Mary Queen of Scots cap. She carried a white prayerbook to which was fastened a white orchid.

Miss Joan Marie Boyd, who was maid of honor for her sister, wore a gown fashioned with an ice-blue satin bodice and bouffant skirt of ice-blue marquisette. A crochet calot was held to her head by a spray of roses and she carried Sweetheart roses and delphinium.

Major Dalby was best man for his son, and the ushers included James L. Phillips, George Keat, Frank B. Weathersbee, Clifford Wannan, George A. Phillips and Robert H. Fergus.

A reception at the Letts Building, 1500 Sixteenth Street, followed the ceremony. Mrs. Boyd, receiving with her son-in-law and daughter, wore a beige crepe costume with violet accessories, and Mrs. Dalby, mother of the bridegroom, who also welcomed the guests, was in pearl gray with aqua accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. Others who assisted were Mrs. Wesley K. Harris, Mrs. Floyd S. Wheeler, Mrs. James L. Phillips, Mrs. Robert Hailey, Miss Frances Otey Hansford and Miss Helen Jane Harman.

When the bridal couple left on a honeymoon in the Adirondacks, Mrs. Dalby wore a moss-green suit with beaver-colored accessories, a brown feather hat and a white orchid corsage.

The bride attended Western High School and Wilson Teachers College. The bridegroom is well known in tennis circles and was intercollegiate champion for the State of Ohio. He is a graduate of Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, and was president of Delta Tau Delta Fraternity.

OUT OF MY MIND

Have You Ever Noticed . . .

By Katharine Brush

That women mixing cocktails usually measure the ingredients, and men do not—but still the men make better cocktails?

That the vast majority of apartment-house doormen and elevator boys appear to be named John?

That there is never enough salt in soup—except when there is too much?

That the average guest in the average bathroom ignores the beautiful little fingertip guest towels—apparently on the theory they look too pretty to open—and prefers the corner of a crumpled towel that has been used, if there is one in sight?

That people shushing other people in a night club during the entertainment invariably create far more disturbance than the people shushed?

That professional beauties—models particularly—almost never drink? But that, if and as they do take it up, it's usually in a big way?

That you can always tell approximately how long a rich person has had his money, by the degree of niggardliness he has achieved when it comes to the small unimportant expenditures?

That it isn't the salt and pepper you forget when you're packing a picnic lunch—it's much more likely to turn out to be the main thing, such as the whole roast chicken?

That young women 26 years old appear to be proud to admit they're 26, but this all ceases suddenly on a girl's twenty-seventh birthday, at which point she goes firmly back to 25, or even 24?

That the great battle cry of all convention delegates at first sight of each other is invariably, "Well, Joe! For crying out loud!" and "Well, Bill! (ditto)."

That nine out of ten people in a street crowd staring upward drop their chins and gape with their mouths open?

And that people waiting in a street crowd outside the fire lines, for example, or near the doorway of a building where an accident has happened, somehow seem to resent the newspaper reporters and cameramen they see there—"Look at the reporters, all hanging around," they say with a kind of sniff—as though (1) they themselves weren't hanging around, too, for far less reason; and as though (2) they wouldn't grab the next edition eagerly to read about it?

That the thing men really hate about long, talon-like red fingernails—the really terrific ones—is the way they look on the inside?

That there's something peculiarly exasperating about being talked to when you've got a faucet turned on and the water running, and have to turn it off to hear? ("They could have waited, couldn't they?" you grumble privately to yourself. Sometimes you even get stubborn, and won't do a thing about it, except call back in a haughty voice, "I can't hear a word you're saying.")

That people who wouldn't dream of borrowing $3 from you without returning it will borrow a $3 book—and one that you dearly love, besides—and never give the matter another thought as long as they live?

That you can tell the rank of a restaurant by the size of the decoy coin on the contribution plate which the maid in the ladies' room sets out?

That colds in the head would be easier to bear if well-intentioned people with theories of their own didn't keep advising you as to what to do for them?

That everybody says "Good morning" without thinking a thing about it, but people are apt to be a little self-conscious about saying "Good afternoon," as if it were a pretentious phrase—and of course "Good day" sounds quaint, and furthermore it sounds commercial, seeming to go inevitably with "—call again." The net result is that most of us are virtually tongue-tied about greetings, during all the midday hours between "Good morning" and "Good night." It makes no sense.

Court Refuses To Dismiss Antitrust Case

New Orleans, July 30 (AP).—The Federal Appellate Court declined today to uphold a Northern Texas district court judgment dismissing an indictment against the New York Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., charging violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act by conspiracy to monopolize interstate commerce in food.

The court, by a two-to-one decision, reversed and remanded the case for further proceedings against the A. & P. on the ground that there was insufficient cause for quashing the indictment. It said that while the information was meager, fuller information, if requested, could and should be supplied by a bill of particulars.

The court's opinion held, however, that the indictment was "fatally defective" as to Business Organization, Inc., and Carl Byoir and was rightly dismissed.

"We consider it your duty under the War Labor Disputes Act and the compliance order of the National War Labor Board in connection with its directive of June 18 to return our mines and other assets to private ownership and urgently request that you take immediate steps to do so."

'Constant Nymph,' Earle, Tops a Superlative Bill

Charles Boyer, Joan Fontaine Lead Superb Cast in Warming Love Story; 'Jerome Kern Album' on the Stage

"THE CONSTANT NYMPH." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel and play by Margaret Kennedy and Basil Dean, adapted to the screen by Kathryn Scola, with music by Erich Waltgang Korngold, costarring Charles Boyer, Joan Fontaine and Alexis Smith, with Charles Coburn, Peter Lorre, Dame May Whitty, Brenda Marshall, Joyce Reynolds, Jean Muir, Montagu Love, Edward Ciannelli, Joanino Crispin, Doris Lloyd, Crauford Kent and numerous others. Directed by Edmund Goulding. At the Earle Theater.

FROM MARGARET KENNEDY'S BEST-SELLER and its dramatization by the author and Basil Dean, Scenarist Kathryn Scola, Producer Henry Blanke, Director Edmund Goulding and a cast of almost inspired selection have derived one of the most perfectly wrought love stories it has been the cinema's privilege to spread upon the screen. Evidently conscious of the exquisite quality of the work, the Warner Brothers have accorded it a production commensurate with its superior worth as a film play of charm, tenderness, humor and a final touch of pathos and tragedy.

That intangible public sense of superlative excellence was manifested by the presence of an overflow crowd that far exceeded the capacity of the theater at yesterday's first performance at the Earle. No one in that tightly packed audience gave any sign of having been misled into a disappointment.

Known to thousands of book-lovers and theatergoers as one of the most popular items of the late '20s, "The Constant Nymph" remains an idyllic tale of undated charm. The passage of the years has not blemished the ethereal beauty of a story that could be true of youth and middle age in any era of human experience.

The action is initiated by the arrival of Lewis Dodd, a composer addicted to musical innovation, at the engagingly undisciplined home of the equally musical Sangers, in the Swiss Alps. Dodd is the idol of the three Sanger daughters and the despair of their profligate father, who perceives in a simple melody dedicated by Dodd to his daughters the basis of an enduring tone poem. His view is shared by Tessa, the uncurbed adolescent, whose youthful infatuation is destined to blossom into the one great love of the composer's life. But to Dodd she is only a delightful and impetuous child. So with no serious contemplation of his own deepest feelings or hers, he marries the aristocratic and wealthy cousin from London and thus puts in motion the engrossing events that make clear too late the depth and power of a love that only Tessa has understood down the years. In the development of this triangular theme are none of the cheap devices of tawdry drama—no impulse or emotion that is clandestine, hidden or needs to be disguised. These are literate and likable people who are the victims rather than the instigators of emotional situations they have power neither to shape nor control. One sympathizes, but never snickers or scoffs.

A Gallery of Stellar Performances

The appeal of the play is infinitely enhanced by the incomparable skill of its cast. In the role of Tessa, Joan Fontaine offers a character study of remarkable variety and complete rightness. Her transition from the hoyden of the hills to an anguished young womanhood in London is accomplished with an elfin grace and mounting forcefulness unmarred by any flaw. As Dodd, Charles Boyer contributes one of his gentlest and most effective portrayals, in which place is found for much that is debonair and humorous, and Charles Coburn and Alexis Smith are proportionately fine as the London sophisticates, who bring disaster to the unrecognized romance of the early sequences. Dame May Whitty and Peter Lorre are important to the action and Tessa's sisters are effectively played by Brenda Marshall, Joyce Reynolds and Jean Muir. The prime interests of all of these combine to punctuate the film with musical interludes that add immeasurably to the charm and orderly progress of a richly rewarding examination of the grand passion.

In his "Jerome Kern Album" stage revue, Producer Harry Anger has matched the screen's quality with unusual skill. The stage bill is brief but of great tunefulness and beauty, thanks largely to the Roxyettes in two of their loveliest routines—"Pantaloons and Parasols" (it should be "Pantalettes") and "Garlands"—and Pat and Sylvia, who sing the "album" of Kern melodies in excellent tenor and soprano. Lew Hoffman is present with a round of juggling and The Imaginators create a considerable audience furore in their pantomimic interpretations of recordings by the Andrews Sisters, the Merry Macs and others, much in the manner of the recent Lowe, Hite and Stanley on the same stage.

"Wacki-Ki Wabbit," one of the most hilarious of the recent Merrie Melodie cartoon comedies in color; the newsreel, paying its doubtful respects to the "Heel" of Italy, and Jo Lombardi's orchestral salute to Jerome Kern are the auxiliaries of a matchlessly assembled program.

'Hay Fever' a Cross Roads Hit

By Marjorie Kelly

Noel Coward's "Hay Fever," currently playing at the Cross Road's Theater, is a play with an awful fascination for amateurs. For one thing, it has a large number of irresistibly funny lines that make it appear actor-proof. For another, there's only one set—convenient and a considerable advantage to a company operating on a small stage and budget.

The funny lines, however, are just about all there is to the play. Action consists mostly of the first-act arrival of four weekend guests, and the hasty and disgruntled third-act departure of same. Although the chatter in between is witty in the best Coward manner, it is a considerable feat to put across three acts of conversation.

Fortunately, the group now playing it at the Cross Roads is at least semiprofessional, and their interpretation of the sophisticated comedy is quite successful.

Leads Well Played

Catherine Ryan, in the role of Judith Bliss, the retired actress who insists on dramatizing everything, makes her delightfully stagey and strikes just the right balance between artificiality and occasional inadvertent genuineness. Gordon Wallace, who has played with Eva LeGallienne and also in London under the management of Edward Laurillard, gives evidence of his experience in a polished performance that seemed to catch the spirit of the play best of all the group.

Others are Grace Pearson, an extraordinarily pretty girl; William Rees, appropriately stodgy as the diplomat; M. Forney Reese, the actress' lascivious rascal of a husband; Zack Waters, handsome and innocuous as her juvenile admirer, and Blanche Mitchell, properly sheeplike as the girl whom Father Bliss invites for the weekend so he can study her as an ingenue type.

The set, with its baby pink walls and drapes, apparently signifies that the Blisses are a sufficiently wacky crowd to have a room in that color, but there will be those who won't care for it. It clashes with many of the strikingly attractive costumes.

Visits Base

Susan Peters, on brief vacation from "Song of Russia," starring Robert Taylor, was the guest recently of General Cousins at the Army Air Base at Santa Ana.

CHARLES BOYER AND JOAN FONTAINE in the costellar roles of the Warner Brothers production of "The Constant Nymph," adapted from the book and play by Margaret Kennedy and Basil Dean, now on view on the screen at the Earle Theater. This perfectly fashioned love idyll also numbers Charles Coburn, Dame May Whitty, Alexis Smith and Peter Lorre among its numerous cast of principals, under the splendid direction of Edmund Goulding

HEDDA HOPPER

Might Be Important!

Hollywood, Calif., July 30.—Jim Davis, singing cowboy, who's also railroad commissioner for Louisiana, held up shooting on "Cyclone Prairie Rangers" while he answered a long-distance phone call, then apologized to Director Kline. "That's all right," said Kline. "Was it important?" "Well," drawled Davis, "I don't know. Some friends called me from Louisiana. They want me to run for Governor . . . Bill Goetz got himself a good man when he signed Jack Mulcahy . . . David Selznick pays off fast. I had a bet with him that he wouldn't be in production by the middle of July. Now I wish I'd made it a thousand instead of $10 . . . Myrt Blum, Jack Benny's business manager, got a thrill when he was listening to short wave radio Saturday night. Who should come on but Jack Benny, from Brazil! Jack has with him Larry Adler, harmonica player; Anna Lee and Winnie Shaw. And on their tour they're all done up in gray uniforms.

LARRY ADLER

They Did It

It was sure gratifying, when I said I'd get some stars for the Hollywood canteen, and loyal, loving souls helped me put it over—John Charles Thomas, Mrs. Mario Chamlee, Al Terhune, Gary Cooper, Paulette Goddard, Lucille Ball, Desi Arnaz, Tallulah Bankhead, Zorina, Hedy Lamarr, John Loder, Joe E. Brown, June Havoc, Eddie Cantor, Roddie McDowall, Wally Beery, Richard Whorf, and a couple of swell harmonica players, Jimmy and Mildred Mulcay, who've recently arrived here. It sure was a gala, and did the boys lap it up! . . . Joan Blondell had friends in for cocktails yesterday then discovered lots of food left over. She phoned Anne Lehr and put in a call for the army. Just as I was leaving, the Army lads moved in.

Blessings for All

When Kay Kyser said he'd give a show at the Pacific Auditorium in Oakland to raise funds for building a swimming pool for the United States Naval Hospital, he had no idea the response would be so great, but it was, and proceeds will give the hospital a whole athletic center, with pool, tennis courts, squash courts, barbecue pits—the works. Twenty thouand people jammed the place. Take was $26,430. When Kay got the idea to make it a recreation center instead of just a pool, in 10 minutes he 2,200 pledges of $50 each . . . June Vincent has completed her first picture and gets another—the lead opposite Allan Jones in "Set to Music." . . . In addition to doing the screen adaptation for the life of Valentino, Marion Parsonnet has fiished an original, "The Guy from Mike's Place," for Eddie Small.

Search Is On

Winnie Sheehan is sending out an S O S to find an actress to play Eddied Rickenbacker's mother. In the film, she'll go from 30 to 80. She must have a strong face and a sturdy figure of the pioneer type. English diction or Shakespearian voice won't do. They want a woman of the soil, just as Rick's own mother is . . . Pete Harrison, critic for 20 years, has put himself in the lion's den by producing "The Deerslayer" for Republic . . . Mike Romanoff didn't care for Alva Johnston's recent magazine story of him. I'm wondering how he'll feel about Johnston's chapter devoted to him in the New Yorker.

Forgot the Heat

Nice time at Arthur Hornblow's beach house. Mervyn LeRoy was amazed at Greer Garson's sudden marriage. Greer had worked for him all day in "Madame Curie," hadn't said one word about marriage. Mervyn was pretty certain she hadn't made up her mind to wed when she left the studio Saturday. One hour later she was married. . . . Since Mervyn named Lana Turner, we asked whether he wouldn't suggest names for her new baby. He came out with "Carol Crane." Be pretty, too, wouldn't it? Then Mrs Bill Goetz said Carol was the name of Crane's first wife. That stopped us. . . . Next door, Mrs. Will Rogers entertained Billie Burke and Director Dorothy Arzner . . . Frances Langford wears a miniature ice pick given her by the troops in the Aleutians in gratitude for helping them thaw out . . . Some day, Producer Sam Marx says, he's going to give out with the suggested titles sent him when he changed "Female of the Species" to "Jenny Was a Lady" . . . Gary Cooper had a letter from a friend in the South Pacific who had just run into Director Frank Lloyd, who said, "I've directed many motion pictures, but I never knew before what action really was. I do now."

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, July 30.

Capt. Ted Lawson, the flier who lost his leg in the Tokyo raid and who wrote "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," has been assigned to a new job for the Army. He will be sent to Santiago, Chile, as an Air Attache at the American Embassy. His wife and baby will accompany him . . . Lawson's recovery is so remarkable that he's been able to obtain co-pilot status . . . He is putting [illegible] per cent of his book-earnings into war bonds. His share, including the movie sale, now amounts to [illegible]0,000. His income tax on that will be $140,000. "I'm happy to pay it," said Lawson, who came back from Tokyo with $220 in his pockets, "to the finest country in the world."

HENRY FORD

Sylvan Joseph, the OPA regional administrator here, spends weekends at his Long Island home. He goes there by train. His wife doesn't use their car for shopping purposes, but uses a bicycle. And when Joseph goes to his country club he travels either by foot or on bicycle twice a day . . . Last weekend, as he was bicycling away from the club, the OPA man almost was run down by a red roadster. He made a memo of the license plates, and had the driver's gas rations taken away—not for careless driving, but for using a car to go to a country club.

A Washington official who found himself in some difficulties was offered assistance by an unpopular man who promised: "I'll go to the White House on this." The official requested him not to intervene, and cited this story: When Woodrow Wilson was ailing, a group of Senators were assigned to visit him, to determine whether he was still capable of running the affairs of the Nation. One of the visitors was Senator Albert Fall of New Mexico, who was involved in the Teapot Dome scandal. "Mr. President," said Senator Fall, as he left, "every night I get down on my knees and pray to God in your behalf" . . . President Wilson later told his secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty: "What right has he got to put me in bad with God?"

Lieut. William Crawford, jr., whose 12 decorations include the Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross, Purple Heart, Air Medal and Oak Leaf Clusters, was at the Stork Club celebrating his furlough. The young flier, who sank three Jap warships and who brought three Flying Fortresses back to base after they almost had been destroyed, danced with Nancy Mae Woodbury . . . When they stepped to the dance floor Miss Woodbury adopted an awkward pose, and danced that way. "Why the strange dance position?" he asked her. Miss Woodbury, who was dancing three feet away, and to one side of him, explained: "I'm trying to dance in such a way that I won't hide your campaign ribbons."

When General Giraud visited Henry Ford recently and lunched with him at Willow Run, Ford told his aides that he wished to inspect the luncheon table before the General's arrival. He went into the dining room, studied the tableware and the seating arrangement, and then told the waiters: "Just one thing wrong. Take those bottles away and bring another kind" . . . And so, for the Giraud luncheon, the waiters removed the bottles of Vichy water.

The three boys from New Bedford, Mass., who ran away from home and came to New York to see the Empire State Building—but were picked up by the Children's Aid Society before they could accomplish their mission—have been invited back, by Al Smith. "That is," Smith added, "if your mothers agree" . . . Henry Wallace's next speech will be made in Chicago. Wallace, in the meantime, has gone to Iowa, to check on farm problems . . . "Sagittarius," of London's new Statesman and Nation, had a poem in the July 10 issue, written a week before.. It's called "The March from Rome," and includes these lines about Il Duce: "When he steams, by express, from the city, leaving behind his portfolio, leaving the Fascist committee, leaving the peace to Badoglio."

Father Guest

Alex Aumont, father of French actor Pierre Aumont, has arrived in Hollywood from New York.

The actor's father made a hurried trip East to pass a few days with another son, Francois Aumont, prior to his departure for overseas duty. He will reside an Aumont's Beverly Hills home.

'Constant Nymph,' Earle, Tops a Superlative Bill

Charles Boyer, Joan Fontaine Lead Superb Cast in Warming Love Story; 'Jerome Kern Album' on the Stage

"THE CONSTANT NYMPH." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel and play by Margaret Kennedy and Basil Dean, adapted to the screen by Kathryn Scola, with music by Erich Waltgang Korngold, costarring Charles Boyer, Joan Fontaine and Alexis Smith, with Charles Coburn, Peter Lorre, Dame May Whitty, Brenda Marshall, Joyce Reynolds, Jean Muir, Montagu Love, Edward Ciannelli, Joanino Crispin, Doris Lloyd, Crauford Kent and numerous others. Directed by Edmund Goulding. At the Earle Theater.

FROM MARGARET KENNEDY'S BEST-SELLER and its dramatization by the author and Basil Dean, Scenarist Kathryn Scola, Producer Henry Blanke, Director Edmund Goulding and a cast of almost inspired selection have derived one of the most perfectly wrought love stories it has been the cinema's privilege to spread upon the screen. Evidently conscious of the exquisite quality of the work, the Warner Brothers have accorded it a production commensurate with its superior worth as a film play of charm, tenderness, humor and a final touch of pathos and tragedy.

That intangible public sense of superlative excellence was manifested by the presence of an overflow crowd that far exceeded the capacity of the theater at yesterday's first performance at the Earle. No one in that tightly packed audience gave any sign of having been misled into a disappointment.

Known to thousands of book-lovers and theatergoers as one of the most popular items of the late '20s, "The Constant Nymph" remains an idyllic tale of undated charm. The passage of the years has not blemished the ethereal beauty of a story that could be true of youth and middle age in any era of human experience.

The action is initiated by the arrival of Lewis Dodd, a composer addicted to musical innovation, at the engagingly undisciplined home of the equally musical Sangers, in the Swiss Alps. Dodd is the idol of the three Sanger daughters and the despair of their profligate father, who perceives in a simple melody dedicated by Dodd to his daughters the basis of an enduring tone poem. His view is shared by Tessa, the uncurbed adolescent, whose youthful infatuation is destined to blossom into the one great love of the composer's life. But to Dodd she is only a delightful and impetuous child. So with no serious contemplation of his own deepest feelings or hers, he marries the aristocratic and wealthy cousin from London and thus puts in motion the engrossing events that make clear too late the depth and power of a love that only Tessa has understood down the years. In the development of this triangular theme are none of the cheap devices of tawdry drama—no impulse or emotion that is clandestine, hidden or needs to be disguised. These are literate and likable people who are the victims rather than the instigators of emotional situations they have power neither to shape nor control. One sympathizes, but never snickers or scoffs.

A Gallery of Stellar Performances

The appeal of the play is infinitely enhanced by the incomparable skill of its cast. In the role of Tessa, Joan Fontaine offers a character study of remarkable variety and complete rightness. Her transition from the hoyden of the hills to an anguished young womanhood in London is accomplished with an elfin grace and mounting forcefulness unmarred by any flaw. As Dodd, Charles Boyer contributes one of his gentlest and most effective portrayals, in which place is found for much that is debonair and humorous, and Charles Coburn and Alexis Smith are proportionately fine as the London sophisticates, who bring disaster to the unrecognized romance of the early sequences. Dame May Whitty and Peter Lorre are important to the action and Tessa's sisters are effectively played by Brenda Marshall, Joyce Reynolds and Jean Muir. The prime interests of all of these combine to punctuate the film with musical interludes that add immeasurably to the charm and orderly progress of a richly rewarding examination of the grand passion.

In his "Jerome Kern Album" stage revue, Producer Harry Anger has matched the screen's quality with unusual skill. The stage bill is brief but of great tunefulness and beauty, thanks largely to the Roxyettes in two of their loveliest routines—"Pantaloons and Parasols" (it should be "Pantalettes") and "Garlands"—and Pat and Sylvia, who sing the "album" of Kern melodies in excellent tenor and soprano. Lew Hoffman is present with a round of juggling and The Imaginators create a considerable audience furore in their pantomimic interpretations of recordings by the Andrews Sisters, the Merry Macs and others, much in the manner of the recent Lowe, Hite and Stanley on the same stage.

"Wacki-Ki Wabbit," one of the most hilarious of the recent Merrie Melodie cartoon comedies in color; the newsreel, paying its doubtful respects to the "Heel" of Italy, and Jo Lombardi's orchestral salute to Jerome Kern are the auxiliaries of a matchlessly assembled program.

'Hay Fever' a Cross Roads Hit

By Marjorie Kelly

Noel Coward's "Hay Fever," currently playing at the Cross Road's Theater, is a play with an awful fascination for amateurs. For one thing, it has a large number of irresistibly funny lines that make it appear actor-proof. For another, there's only one set—convenient and a considerable advantage to a company operating on a small stage and budget.

The funny lines, however, are just about all there is to the play. Action consists mostly of the first-act arrival of four weekend guests, and the hasty and disgruntled third-act departure of same. Although the chatter in between is witty in the best Coward manner, it is a considerable feat to put across three acts of conversation.

Fortunately, the group now playing it at the Cross Roads is at least semiprofessional, and their interpretation of the sophisticated comedy is quite successful.

Leads Well Played

Catherine Ryan, in the role of Judith Bliss, the retired actress who insists on dramatizing everything, makes her delightfully stagey and strikes just the right balance between artificiality and occasional inadvertent genuineness. Gordon Wallace, who has played with Eva LeGallienne and also in London under the management of Edward Laurillard, gives evidence of his experience in a polished performance that seemed to catch the spirit of the play best of all the group.

Others are Grace Pearson, an extraordinarily pretty girl; William Rees, appropriately stodgy as the diplomat; M. Forney Reese, the actress' lascivious rascal of a husband; Zack Waters, handsome and innocuous as her juvenile admirer, and Blanche Mitchell, properly sheeplike as the girl whom Father Bliss invites for the weekend so he can study her as an ingenue type.

The set, with its baby pink walls and drapes, apparently signifies that the Blisses are a sufficiently wacky crowd to have a room in that color, but there will be those who won't care for it. It clashes with many of the strikingly attractive costumes.

Visits Base

Susan Peters, on brief vacation from "Song of Russia," starring Robert Taylor, was the guest recently of General Cousins at the Army Air Base at Santa Ana.

HEDDA HOPPER

Might Be Important!

Hollywood, Calif., July 30.—Jim Davis, singing cowboy, who's also railroad commissioner for Louisiana, held up shooting on "Cyclone Prairie Rangers" while he answered a long-distance phone call, then apologized to Director Kline. "That's all right," said Kline. "Was it important?" "Well," drawled Davis, "I don't know. Some friends called me from Louisiana. They want me to run for Governor . . . Bill Goetz got himself a good man when he signed Jack Mulcahy . . . David Selznick pays off fast. I had a bet with him that he wouldn't be in production by the middle of July. Now I wish I'd made it a thousand instead of $10 . . . Myrt Blum, Jack Benny's business manager, got a thrill when he was listening to short wave radio Saturday night. Who should come on but Jack Benny, from Brazil! Jack has with him Larry Adler, harmonica player; Anna Lee and Winnie Shaw. And on their tour they're all done up in gray uniforms.

LARRY ADLER

They Did It

It was sure gratifying, when I said I'd get some stars for the Hollywood canteen, and loyal, loving souls helped me put it over—John Charles Thomas, Mrs. Mario Chamlee, Al Terhune, Gary Cooper, Paulette Goddard, Lucille Ball, Desi Arnaz, Tallulah Bankhead, Zorina, Hedy Lamarr, John Loder, Joe E. Brown, June Havoc, Eddie Cantor, Roddie McDowall, Wally Beery, Richard Whorf, and a couple of swell harmonica players, Jimmy and Mildred Mulcay, who've recently arrived here. It sure was a gala, and did the boys lap it up! . . . Joan Blondell had friends in for cocktails yesterday then discovered lots of food left over. She phoned Anne Lehr and put in a call for the army. Just as I was leaving, the Army lads moved in.

Blessings for All

When Kay Kyser said he'd give a show at the Pacific Auditorium in Oakland to raise funds for building a swimming pool for the United States Naval Hospital, he had no idea the response would be so great, but it was, and proceeds will give the hospital a whole athletic center, with pool, tennis courts, squash courts, barbecue pits—the works. Twenty thouand people jammed the place. Take was $26,430. When Kay got the idea to make it a recreation center instead of just a pool, in 10 minutes he 2,200 pledges of $50 each . . . June Vincent has completed her first picture and gets another—the lead opposite Allan Jones in "Set to Music." . . . In addition to doing the screen adaptation for the life of Valentino, Marion Parsonnet has fiished an original, "The Guy from Mike's Place," for Eddie Small.

Search Is On

Winnie Sheehan is sending out an S O S to find an actress to play Eddied Rickenbacker's mother. In the film, she'll go from 30 to 80. She must have a strong face and a sturdy figure of the pioneer type. English diction or Shakespearian voice won't do. They want a woman of the soil, just as Rick's own mother is . . . Pete Harrison, critic for 20 years, has put himself in the lion's den by producing "The Deerslayer" for Republic . . . Mike Romanoff didn't care for Alva Johnston's recent magazine story of him. I'm wondering how he'll feel about Johnston's chapter devoted to him in the New Yorker.

Forgot the Heat

Nice time at Arthur Hornblow's beach house. Mervyn LeRoy was amazed at Greer Garson's sudden marriage. Greer had worked for him all day in "Madame Curie," hadn't said one word about marriage. Mervyn was pretty certain she hadn't made up her mind to wed when she left the studio Saturday. One hour later she was married. . . . Since Mervyn named Lana Turner, we asked whether he wouldn't suggest names for her new baby. He came out with "Carol Crane." Be pretty, too, wouldn't it? Then Mrs Bill Goetz said Carol was the name of Crane's first wife. That stopped us. . . . Next door, Mrs. Will Rogers entertained Billie Burke and Director Dorothy Arzner . . . Frances Langford wears a miniature ice pick given her by the troops in the Aleutians in gratitude for helping them thaw out . . . Some day, Producer Sam Marx says, he's going to give out with the suggested titles sent him when he changed "Female of the Species" to "Jenny Was a Lady" . . . Gary Cooper had a letter from a friend in the South Pacific who had just run into Director Frank Lloyd, who said, "I've directed many motion pictures, but I never knew before what action really was. I do now."

LEONARD LYONS

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, July 30.

Capt. Ted Lawson, the flier who lost his leg in the Tokyo raid and who wrote "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," has been assigned to a new job for the Army. He will be sent to Santiago, Chile, as an Air Attache at the American Embassy. His wife and baby will accompany him . . . Lawson's recovery is so remarkable that he's been able to obtain co-pilot status . . . He is putting 50 per cent of his book-earnings into war bonds. His share, including the movie sale, now amounts to $140,000. He's happy to pay it," said Lawson, who came back from Tokyo with $220 in his pockets, "to the finest country in the world."

HENRY FORD

Sylvan Joseph, the OPA regional administrator here, spends weekends at his Long Island home. He goes there by train. His wife doesn't use their car for shopping purposes, but uses a bicycle. And when Joseph goes to his country club he travels either by foot or on bicycle twice a day . . . Last weekend, as he was bicycling away from the club, the OPA man almost was run down by a red roadster. He made a memo of the license plates, and had the driver's gas rations taken away—not for careless driving, but for using a car to go to a country club.

A Washington official who found himself in some difficulties was offered assistance by an unpopular man who promised: "I'll go to the White House on this." The official requested him not to intervene, and cited this story: When Woodrow Wilson was ailing, a group of Senators were assigned to visit him, to determine whether he was still capable of running the affairs of the Nation. One of the visitors was Senator Albert Fall of New Mexico, who was involved in the Teapot Dome scandal. "Mr. President," said Senator Fall, as he left, "every night I get down on my knees and pray to God in your behalf" . . . President Wilson later told his secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty: "What right has he got to put me in bad with God?"

Lieut. William Crawford, jr., whose 12 decorations include the Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross, Purple Heart, Air Medal and Oak Leaf Clusters, was at the Stork Club celebrating his furlough. The young flier, who sank three Jap warships and who brought three Flying Fortresses back to base after they almost had been destroyed, danced with Nancy Mae Woodbury . . . When they stepped to the dance floor Miss Woodbury adopted an awkward pose, and danced that way. "Why the strange dance position?" he asked her. Miss Woodbury, who was dancing three feet away, and to one side of him, explained: "I'm trying to dance in such a way that I won't hide your campaign ribbons."

When General Giraud visited Henry Ford recently and lunched with him at Willow Run, Ford told his aides that he wished to inspect the luncheon table before the General's arrival. He went into the dining room, studied the tableware and the seating arrangement, and then told the waiters: "Just one thing wrong. Take those bottles away and bring another kind" . . . And so, for the Giraud luncheon, the waiters removed the bottles of Vichy water.

The three boys from New Bedford, Mass., who ran away from home and came to New York to see the Empire State Building—but were picked up by the Children's Aid Society before they could accomplish their mission—have been invited back, by Al Smith. "That is," Smith added, "if your mothers agree" . . . Henry Wallace's next speech will be made in Chicago. Wallace, in the meantime, has gone to Iowa, to check on farm problems . . . "Sagittarius," of London's new Statesman and Nation, had a poem in the July 10 issue, written a week before.. It's called "The March from Rome," and includes these lines about Il Duce: "When he steams, by express, from the city, leaving behind his portfolio, leaving the Fascist committee, leaving the peace to Badoglio."

Father Guest

Alex Aumont, father of French actor Pierre Aumont, has arrived in Hollywood from New York.

The actor's father made a hurried trip East to pass a few days with another son, Francois Aumont, prior to his departure for overseas duty. He will reside an Aumont's Beverly Hills home.
